"GREATER THAN KING"—J. P. MORGAN.

The portrait herewith reproduced from Harper's Weekly is believed to be the best likeness of J. Pierpont Morgan, America's greatest financier. J. J. Hill said in an interview on Saturday that had Mr. Morgan been in New York instead of in Europe last Thursday's riot in stocks would not have occurred, and cables from London declare financiers there are looking to him as the man who can prevent trouble on the London exchange when it opens today. Mr. Morgan will be in London, and will, it is believed, find a way to avert any trouble.

The power wielded by Mr. Morgan is at once evident when it is pointed out that business enterprises organized under his direction, and in great part remaining under his control, represent a third of the wealth of the United States engaged in railroad and industrial affairs, or about $7,000,000,000. The billion-dollar steel trust is one of Mr. Morgan's enterprises still fresh in the public mind.

Mr. Morgan began business life at 20 as a clerk in his father's bank. He inherited $10,000,000, and has given $5,000,000 to charities in the last fifteen years.

FOR BIG CANAL, DESPITE BRITAIN.

Majority in the United States Senate in Harmony on Chief Points of Nicaragua Plans.

DITCH TO BE AMERICAN.

Clayton-Bulwer Treaty Not to Stand in the Way of Completing Link Between the Oceans.

HOPE TO AVOID ANY CLASH.

Concessions on Alaskan Boundary as the Price of Liberty of Action Are Impossible—Waterway Not Neutral in a War.

NEWS FROM NATIONAL CAPITAL.

WASHINGTON BUREAU CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Washington, D. C., May 12.

When Secretary Hay returns to Washington with the President he will, it is said, begin actual consideration of the Nicaraguan Canal problem. There is now in writing at the department a summary of the views of more than a majority of the Senate. There is wide divergence in these views, which were expressed verbally and in informal conversation.

Senators Agree on Main Points Regarding Canal.

A careful study of the opinions of Senators indicates, so it is said by those in a position to know, considerable unanimity on certain salient features of the problem. In the first place, it is agreed that the Clayton-Bulwer treaty is the only thing in the way of an actual contract which prevents the United States from building the canal itself. In the second place, a majority of the Senate is clearly of the opinion that the Clayton-Bulwer treaty can be abrogated or "denounced," as the diplomats term it. The Senators entirely reject the idea that the Clayton-Bulwer treaty is in the nature of a perpetual contract which can be terminated only by the consent of both parties to it. A clear majority of the Senators are of the opinion that the treaty should be abrogated as the easiest way to build the canal, but there is a large element in the Senate which believes that the forcible abrogation of the treaty by the United States, against the wishes of Great Britain, would be an unfriendly act and would result in strained relations between the two countries. The Senatorial sentiment favors a guarantee of the neutrality by the United States alone.

Assuming that Great Britain might agree to the abrogation of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, if given a quid pro quo, it can be stated that an overwhelming majority of the Senate will object to making any concessions in the Alaskan boundary matter.

The majority of the Senate favors a distinctively American canal, owned and controlled by the United States alone. Guided by the opinions of military and naval authorities, however, a bare majority of the Senate is not inclined to insist on the fortification of the canal.

There is practical unanimity, however, on the proposition that in case of war to which the United States is a party, there must be no treaty obligation with Great Britain or any other nation preventing this country using the canal as a military and naval advantage of its own, open to its own ships, closed to the enemy. Finally, it is decidedly a matter of doubt whether the Senate would or would not abrogate the treaty in open defiance of the wishes of Great Britain.

This outline of the Senatorial sentiment is believed to be as close a summary as could be made of a series of conversations with individual Senators of which no precise notes were made at the time. It is supposed, however, that a treaty with Great Britain abrogating the Clayton-Bulwer convention and guaranteeing on the part of the United States the absolute neutrality of the canal, except when this country was at war, would pass the Senate with all idea of fortifications omitted.

Neutrality to Be Pledged Only in Time of Peace.

Something much like this is likely to be submitted to Great Britain. King Edward's people, being a great maritime nation, would reap most benefit from the canal, which would be at the service of Great Britain in every case except during war with the United States. These suggestions will be made to Great Britain, it is believed, as the basis for a canal treaty.

In case Great Britain should reject this tender it is deemed probable the Senate would abrogate the Clayton-Bulwer treaty and go ahead to build the canal. In this latter case, in the event of a war between Great Britain and France, for instance, this country could open or close the canal to either or both belligerents, as it saw fit, while if neutrality were guaranteed it would be compelled to keep the canal open to both.

It is assumed that Great Britain still clings to the idea of a concession of some character on the Alaskan boundary in return for the abrogation of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, but Senatorial opposition to this is almost unanimous.

American Water Route to the Atlantic Urged.

STREET MASHER A HYENA.

MEN WHO OGLE WOMEN DENOUNCED FROM TWO PULPITS.

The Rev. W. T. Meloy in Address to Congregation Likens the Nuisances to the Laughing Beasts, While Dr. Torrey Is in a Fighting Mood and Wants to Whip the Fellows—Audiences Approve the Sentiments Expressed by the Men of the Cloth.

He who mashes or attempts to mash is a hyena, according to the Rev. W. T. Meloy, who told his congregation in the First United Presbyterian Church last evening that the pulpit should do its part in ridding the city of the simpering creatures who stand on street corners and ogle women.

The minister had just finished classing the masher with the thugs, the pickpockets, the holdup man, and the "con" man. His auditors nodded approvingly.

Meanwhile, the Rev. R. A. Torrey, in the Moody Church, was denouncing the masher as a "contemptible whelp" who should be thrashed for his impudence. A large congregation seemed to be in full sympathy with the speaker.

"The newspapers have called attention to the fact," said the Rev. Mr. Meloy, "that there is a species of persons in this city who are trying to gain the attention of the silly and weak. By a vulgar display of dress and attentions they seek the notice of those who will heed them. They are even said to go so far as to insult our wives and daughters.

"Plans are being devised to drive out these immoral hyenas and eradicate the evil from society. Such efforts are to be commended as a needed reform along social lines. The newspapers have directed public attention to the existence of the evil, and it is the duty not only of the newspapers but of the pulpit to undertake the work.

"Chicago is gaining a reputation for evil, and it is possible that the ministry has paid too little attention to the manners of the city. If the manners of some are bad they should be corrected."

The Rev. Mr. Torrey announced that he felt like fighting whenever he met one of the ogling crowd.

"The so-called masher," he said, "is among the smallest and most contemptible of the male human being. As a matter of fact they are a class of contemptible whelps. Any woman who has anything to do with one of the species is a fool, and their attentions should be shunned as vile and sinful.

"I never yet knew of a masher who was not a coward at heart. The only treatment for this miserable class of men is to whip, kick, and beat them.

"I have no intention of wasting any more breath upon these contemptible rascals who annoy women. I always feel like taking my coat off when I see one of these gentry and giving him a good thrashing."

FALL OF THREE STORIES WAKENS A SOMNAMBULIST.

Ivar Sand of 298 Noble Street Finds Himself Lying on Basement Stairway with Bike System.

Ivar Sand of 298 Noble street, walked in his sleep early yesterday morning and may die as a result. Sand walked out of a third-story window and fell into a basement stairway. He is now at the Deaconess Hospital in a precarious condition.

Sand has been a victim of somnambulism for years, but lately he thought he had outgrown the habit. His wife's illness allowed him but little sleep on Thursday and Friday nights, and when he went to bed on Saturday night he fell into a heavy slumber. At 2 o'clock in the morning he awoke to find himself lying in the basement stairway barely able to move.

He had arisen in his sleep, walked through an adjoining room to an open window and fallen from the third story. The wooden railing surrounding the basement stairway he had broken into fragments. When he realized his position, Sand mustered his strength and crawled painfully up-stairs. Later he was taken to the hospital, where it was said that two ribs had been broken in the fall and that he had sustained serious internal injuries.

HUNT GOLD IN SOUTH AMERICA.

Party Leaves Chicago to Explore Land on Which There Recently Have Been Rich Finds.

A party of 100, including civil engineers, machinists, mining experts, essayists, and guides, left Chicago last night for New York, where they sail on May 18 for Colombia, South America, whither they go in quest of gold along the River Nechi. The party was in charge of H. S. Derby, for many years a well known attorney, and M. S. Feinberg, a mining engineer of long experience. Already there are four carloads of machinery and tools at New York, which will be loaded upon the steamer Atlas of the Atlas line today.

The property which is to be explored lies 200 miles from Zaragoza, on the Magdalena River. It comprises 1,000 acres and was recently acquired by Philip D. Block of the Inland Steel company and Louis Benjamin of the Block-Pollak Iron company.

Recent discoveries in that locality have caused considerable excitement and give promise for that section becoming an El Dorado of South America. Mr. Derby expects to be absent several months.

TO LAUNCH BOOM FOR MAYOR.

Spring Picnic of the Cook County Democrats Expected to Have a National Angle.

At the annual picnic of the County Democracy it is predicted the Presidential prospects of Mayor Harrison will be given local recognition and an "early spring" boom launched. Arrangements for the outing were made yesterday afternoon at the weekly meeting of the Democracy. The picnic will be held on June 15 at Fox River Park. With the proceeds of the outing the club plans to carry the Presidential boom into the South, visiting Charleston, S. C., at the time of its winter exposition and swinging around to New Orleans for the Mardi Gras. David B. Hill will be the principal speaker at the annual picnic.

SMALL BOYS AS CAR ROBBERS.

Edward Dunworth, 7 Years Old, and Daniel Murphy, Aged 8, Admit Raid in Railway Yards.

Edward Dunworth, 7 years old, and Daniel Murphy, 8 years, both of 617 Baker avenue, were arrested yesterday by Charles Arntz, a watchman in the employ of the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne and Chicago railway, for breaking in a car and stealing a case of canned beef. The boys ate two cans of the stuff and hid the rest. They admitted their guilt. The boys were allowed to go home, but will be kept under the surveillance of the Juvenile Court.

OFFICERS' CLUB BUFFET CLOSED.

MEN RUSH TO HIGHWOOD.

Four Saloons There Ignore the Sunday Law and Do a Big Business with Soldiers.

SEEK FACTS FOR PASTORS.

The buffet of the officers' club at Fort Sheridan was abolished late on Saturday night by Colonel Van Horne, and now the post is dry enough to satisfy even the most rabid of the agitators who have selected the fort for reform. It became generally known during the week that the officers had a private supply of liquor at their headquarters.

The officers' club has been to its members what the canteen was to the enlisted men. It was similar in its rules to the majority of social clubs in Evanston and Highland Park. Each man paid a small amount each month, and with it liquor was purchased. The club's existence was unknown to outsiders until complaints were made to Colonel Van Horne. Some of the affidavits which the ministerial committee have been keeping such a secret had bearing on the existence of this club. The action of Colonel Van Horne came as a surprise, and when known in Highwood created great merriment among the saloonkeepers.

Increase in the Absentees.

At the headquarters of the post evidence against the closing of the canteen continued to come in yesterday. At the roll call at taps on Saturday night thirty-eight men were reported as absent without leave, against thirty-three the day before. The increase of five is the largest for the second day after pay day that the fort has known. Yesterday at the guardhouse it was reported seventy-two men were under arrest for drunkenness, against fifty-six for the day before, another unusual increase. At retreat, 6:30 p. m., yesterday sixteen men were reported absent, against twelve the day before. These absentees are supposed either to be drunk or in the saloons.

Rumors of Many Desertions.

Rumors of desertion were rife at the fort and at Highwood yesterday. Boys from the Southern States, almost without exception, are also said to be affected. Many took their clothes to Highwood yesterday, and one of the saloonkeepers remarked that ten men entered his saloon together and asked for lodgings preparatory to slipping away. As ten days will have to go before the men are marked as deserters the officers are helpless. Several men asked the fare to Columbus and Louisville yesterday and three made the same inquiry as to Cleveland. All had money.

Detectives of the Anti-Saloon league were in Highwood yesterday getting evidence as to the violation of the State dramshop law. One dressed in light gray entered all the saloons that were open.

"He drinks, I can see that," said one saloonkeeper, and it was the only comment made.

Highwood Saloons Open Sunday.

Of the eight saloons in town four had their back doors open, but the rest were closed tight. Those selling drinks were:

B. A. Welsh, two barkeepers, and large crowds all day.

J. V. Garrity, two barkeepers, and medium crowds; all wineroom closed.

Charles Benson, two barkeepers, and large number of soldiers; interest heightened by loud talk and a fight with beer glasses and seltzer bottles.

D. H. Murphy, two barkeepers, and large number of soldiers all day; many of the men left in drunken condition.

Early in the day members of the grocery firm of Steensohn & Preston watched the revels from their windows with a view to getting evidence. Mayor Hogan remarked, as he gazed away from the saloons, "I can't see any beer sold; can you?" He told Marshal Moore to close every saloon that had gambling. No arrests were made, but several men were told to get on the cars and go home.

MAN SHOWS HEROISM AS HE IS SCALDING TO DEATH.

William Phelps Loses His Life Inside a Boiler in Order to Allow Companion with a Family to Escape.

Indianapolis, Ind., May 12.—William Phelps of Richmond, Ky., and James Stansbury of this city were cleaning the inside of an eight-foot upright boiler at the cerealine mills this afternoon when an employé turned on the steam, thinking the stopcock was tight.

The scalding steam poured in on the two men. The only exit was up a ladder to a manhole in the top. Both jumped for the ladder. Phelps reached it first, but jumped aside and shouted, "You go first, Jim; you are married."

Stansbury sprang up the ladder and escaped with slight burns about the face and legs. Though Phelps followed at his heels, his act of heroism cost him his life. By the time he had followed Stansbury up the ladder the flesh was dropping from his limbs. He lived for two hours in terrible agony.

"It's was Jim's right to go first," said he quietly. "He is married." Both men are colored.

MANY TELEGRAPH POLES BURN.

Western Union Loses $600,000 of Property in Fire Near Detroit.

Detroit, Mich., May 12.—[Special.]—The Western Union Telegraph company today lost by fire 100,000 telegraph poles, valued at about $600,000, which were stored in the distributing yards at Delroy, just south of this city. The total loss by the afternoon fire was about $800,000, divided as follows:

Balliotte & Furgason, lumber mill, $50,000; Brownlee & Co.'s sawmill and lumber, $45,000; Western Union Telegraph company, cedar poles, $600,000; Carkin, Stickney & Cram, loss on dredge, $70,000; Maltby Lumber company, $50,000.

The fire started in the Balliotte & Furgason mill, which had been idle for some time, and spread rapidly owing to the high wind that was blowing.

YIELDS JIMMY AT PULPIT.

BURGLAR GIVES UP TOOLS IN PACIFIC GARDEN MISSION.

Man in Rear of Room Listens to Plea of Assistant Monroe, Joins the Penitent Ones, and Publicly Declares That He Is Done with His Evil Ways—Wants to Live Better Live for the Sake of His Conscience—Prayers for His Success.

A hard-visaged man, who said he had been a burglar for years, gave up his "jimmy" and declared he "had religion" at the Pacific Garden Mission last night. He had wearied of his evil ways, he said, and would begin life anew.

The meeting at the mission was under way, and Assistant Superintendent Harry Monroe was speaking. He made an earnest plea to his auditors to forsake their worldly ways, and ended by asking the penitent ones to step to the front. Some twenty men and women responded.

The burglar was sitting in a rear seat. He rose to his feet, hesitated, then started for the door. At that moment there was a "hallelujah" from a woman in the crowd.

The burglar turned and walked straight up to the exhorter. His hands were in his pockets, and when he took them out there was a jingling sound.

"Here, take these," was the fellow's blunt command, as he extended a bunch of skeleton keys to Assistant Monroe. "I won't need 'em any more, I guess. I've been a burglar for a good many years, and I've made up my mind to quit."

The mission worker took the keys, and again the burglar dug into his pockets. A jimmy and several chisels were produced, and these, too, were handed to the evangelist. Then the burglar produced a bag containing other implements used by his craft.

"You see, I'm pretty well fixed," he smiled, as he handed over the tools, "but I won't need 'em any more. It doesn't pay to be wicked, and I'm going to see if there's any profit in the better life. I don't mean the money part—it's a man's feelings that hurt him when he robs."

There followed a prayer that the burglar might be true to his resolve, and then men and women shook the hand that had piled the jimmy. The man remained till the meeting adjourned, then lost himself in the street, first promising Missionary Monroe to call on him today, when an effort will be made to secure employment for the burglar.

The Pacific Garden Mission already had a record of two burglars reformed. Several years ago these men gave up their tools in much the same fashion as did last night's converts and were promised help in carrying out their good resolves. Both of these men now hold responsible positions. One of them is employed on a morning newspaper.

POLICEMAN SHOOTS DOWN FUGITIVE; MAN MAY DIE.

Newsboy Louis Marshall Taken for a Highwayman and Fired On by Jacobson of the Central Detail.

While attempting to escape arrest last night Louis Marshall, a newsboy, was shot and probably fatally wounded by Policeman Jacobson of the Central detail. Marshall, in company with John Whalen and Thomas Collins, newsboys, went into the saloon of Peter Lindholm, 171 Calhoun place, and after ordering drinks, it is said, refused to pay for them. A fight followed, during which glasses were thrown at Lindholm. Drawing his revolver, Lindholm fired three shots into the floor and the men ran from the place.

Jacobson heard the shots and entered the alley just in time to see the three men running west. Thinking a robbery had been committed Jacobson fired, after vainly calling on the men to stop.

Marshall staggered and fell. He was taken to the County Hospital, where the attending physicians said his wound would probably prove fatal. Marshall's companions, Whalen and Collins, escaped, but were arrested later and locked up at the Central Police Station.

Edward Seamons, alias Morris, was shot and seriously wounded late last night by George Benson, a saloonkeeper at 842 West Randolph street. Seamons, it is charged, threatened to shoot every one in the saloon, and Benson says he fired in self-defense. Benson was arrested and will be held pending the outcome of Benson's injuries.

Charles Grosse Proposes Toast and Expires After Swallowing His Beer—Alcoholism Assigned as the Cause.

"Here's luck," said Charles Grosse, as he raised a glass of beer to his lips in the saloon at 815 West Madison street yesterday. Grosse drank the beer and then fell to the floor dead. The deceased was 45 years old and lived in a lodging-house at 98 Madison street. He was employed by H. F. Harvey as porter in the saloon. Harvey says the man had been drinking considerably, and he believes alcoholism was the cause of death.

LEVEE BULLY MAKES AN ERROR.

Attempts to Whip a Champion Pugilist and Falls Far Short of Success.

"Big Jim" Moran started in to clean out the levee at 2 o'clock yesterday morning. It was his old trick. He had done it before. This time he ran up against "Jim" Popp, lightweight champion pugilist of Canada, and the levee wasn't cleaned.

The meeting was in Burke's place, 412½ State street. Moran, who is a switchman, was accompanied by three husky Stock-Yards men.

"You fellows get out of here," he commanded as he entered Burke's place. The occupants of the saloon started for the back door, but one frail-looking young man remained.

"Did you hear what I said?" roared Moran, as he stepped up to the youth.

"Yes, but I didn't care," replied Popp.

Moran swung at the young man and received a punch that sent him to the floor. Moran's friends then joined in, and Popp was forced to whip the crowd.

READY TO AIR CITY DEALS IN GRAND RAPIDS.

Grand Jury Investigation the Result of Re-election of L. K. Salsbury as Attorney.

HINT AT QUEER METHODS.

MAY SHOW ODD INDUSTRY.

Several Firms Said to Have Furnished Big "Promotion Fund" and Never Secured Fat Contracts Promised Them.

FACTS MUST BE MADE PUBLIC.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Grand Rapids, Mich., May 12.—[Special.]—The reelection of Lant K. Salsbury as City Attorney of Grand Rapids by the City Council last week, in spite of his indictment in Chicago on a charge of embezzlement in February last, is responsible for the meeting of a grand jury tomorrow to investigate not only Salsbury's conduct, but to bring about, if possible, a general investigation of municipal methods in this city.

It is hinted by those behind the movement for a thorough airing of officials' actions that details of a novel industry will be developed—that of proposing schemes which involve large expenditures of public moneys, interesting contractors in various cities of the country, securing "in advance" goodly sums from as many firms as possible for "promotion expenses," and then dropping the plans. The persons furnishing the "promotion funds" as a rule are not in a position to make open complaint, even when they find the contract for which they bid promised to several other firms.

First Grand Jury in the County.

The grand jury which will be sworn in tomorrow morning will be the first in the history of this (Kent) county, outside of the Federal courts. While the cause for its summoning really is the indictment of Salsbury in Chicago for the alleged appropriation of $30,000 furnished by K. C. Barton of Omaha, who expected to secure a contract for building a water supply plant, this case is not likely to appear in the proceedings.

The principal affair to be brought to the attention of the inquisitorial body, it is said, will be that of David Fitzgerald of New York, who all but secured the same contract involved in the Barton case last fall. The discovery that a certified check for $100,000, furnished as an evidence of good faith, proved worthless, upset the plan to award the work to Fitzgerald. Now, it is said, a sum in cash equal to the amount of the check and provided by the men backing Fitzgerald in his effort to get the contract, was sent to this city and distributed as are all such "promotion funds."

May Expose Unique Industry.

This new industry, should the claims of those who urged the investigation prove true, is unique in that funds of this sort usually have strings to them which prevent the men who are "promoted" from laying their hands upon the cash until they have "delivered the goods." It would seem that moneyed men in outside cities have more confidence in their friends here than is customary in this line of deals.

"To inquire into and report on such matters of public concern as may rightfully come before it," is the nominal task for which the grand jury will meet. However, this clause covers a multitude of matters and the inquiry is certain to develop a few sensations.

Re-elected as City Attorney.

Salsbury was reelected Monday night and Judges Wolcott and Perkins of the Circuit Court called the grand jury the next day.

Back of the movement also is the Civic club of this city. It was formed soon after the Salsbury indictment and arrest in Chicago and is akin to the Civic federation and Citizens' association of Chicago. Its membership comprises the better citizenship of the city and a prominent clause in its constitution defining its purposes reads:

"To discover and correct abuses in municipal administration and to secure better conditions in all things which affect the people in common."

The indictment of City Attorney Salsbury by the Cook County grand jury brought to a head all the charges and suspicions of "boodling" on the part of the members of the City Council of Grand Rapids, which have been rife here for a long time. It was something tangible to go on and the demand that an investigation be had arose all over the city at once.

Secures Votes of Republicans.

Nothing was done, however, until the Council voted the indicted man back into his old office and then the demand could not be denied. What made the case worse was that, although Salsbury is a Democrat, it took Republican votes to elect him and he got them. The Aldermen, however, took care that the ballot which elected him be a secret one, so the identity of his supporters can only be guessed at. That they were bound to him under extraordinary obligations thus to vote him back into office was conceded on all hands and public feeling has been at a boiling point ever since.

"Chicago would never have done that, even at the worst stage of its City Council," was the remark made by Vice President Wylie of the Civic club today, and the remark represents the feeling of the better class of citizens.

In the meantime the men who are under suspicion are attempting to befog the work cut out for the grand jury by demanding it take up everything of a shady character which has occurred in the public life of Grand Rapids during the last decade and to sidetrack its investigation of them by attempting to direct it in a dozen different channels.

"I think, however," said Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Charles E. Ward, who has charge of the case, "the grand jury will stick pretty closely to the water works inquiry. It is, of course, proper for it to take up any outside matter it chooses."

The water works matter has been before the City Council for a long time. The water here is taken from the Grand River, and there has been much complaint about it. Several plans for a better supply have been suggested—by filtration, from springs, and so on—but the one which has met with most favor has been the one to draw the supply from Lake Michigan, several miles distant. The cost has been roughly estimated at $3,000,000, but this is said by practical men to be too high. It went in all Council discussions, however, for want of accurate figures.

Last fall the Council one day voted in favor of advertising for bids for various plans of giving a pure water supply, and the remarkable thing about the matter was that it provided for an opening of the bids after five days of advertisement. It was pointed out at the time that responsible men desiring to bid on a $3,000,000 contract would require more than five days to investigate it, as that time would not give them an opportunity to walk over the ground. Furthermore, the advertisement was confined to the local papers and had no general circulation.

First Bids on the Water Works.

At the end of the five days, however, bids came in, and two of them—one by a man of the name of Jackson, who proposed to furnish water from what is known as the "Bailey Springs," and another from David Fitzgerald of New York, to get water from Lake Michigan—were considered the only important ones. Each was accompanied by what purported to be a certified check for $100,000, as a guarantee of good faith.

How Fitzgerald heard of the matter out in New York and managed to get here in time to go over the ground, make his calculations, and do other necessary things in the five days of the advertisement is not explained, and is one of the things the grand jury is expected to look into.

A special committee, consisting of Aldermen Slocum, Doran, Muir, Forbes, Ghysels, McCool, and Donovan, had been named on "water supply," and at the Council meeting of Oct. 15 it brought in a report favoring the Fitzgerald bid. The report was known to have been prepared by City Attorney Salisbury who was in constant consultation with the committee, and much interested in the water supply project.

One Project Only Is Considered.

This report declared all other projects than the bringing of water from Lake Michigan without merit, and strongly favored the Fitzgerald bid. It explained that it was impossible for the city to do the work itself, as it had not the money, and the citizens would not consent to the necessary bonds, but pictured the Fitzgerald bid as a most favorable one. That offer was to build a forty-six-inch main to the lake, emptying into a 60,000,000 gallon reservoir, and a forty-two-inch main from the reservoir to the city mains, furnishing a maximum capacity of 35,000,000 gallons a day, the contractors at the end of fifty years to turn over the entire plant to the city.

As a recompense the city was to pay $24 a million gallons for the water, and it was all figured out that at a meter rate of 4½ cents a hundred cubic foot the city could make a lot of money, and at the end of fifty years acquire a water plant all its own.

Check Proves to Be Valueless.

After the favorable report of the committee it was expected the Council would indorse the project at its next meeting, but some people here who happened to be of an inquisitive turn of mind and knew something about financial affairs started an inquiry as to the value of the certified checks for $100,000 which accompanied the two main bids. They discovered that the Jackson check was drawn on and certified by the Empire Trust and Security company of New York City, a concern which had no existence, and the Fitzgerald check was certified by the alleged banking firm of Edmund P. Schmidt & Co. of 52 Broadway, New York. Inquiry at that number showed that Edmund P. Schmidt & Co. occupied desk room in a store occupied by the Pianograph company and had not as yet paid a judgment entered against it for $170 for a check which it had given on a bank in which it had no deposit.

This little discovery threw the water supply contract badly into the air and Mayor Perry sent in a message in which he commented on the worthlessness of the certified checks and declared something better must be shown before business could be done with Fitzgerald. So the matter was sent back to the special committee.

Second Time Asks Proposals.

This committee then made another report in which it recognized the force of the criticism made against the five days' advertisement by recommending that another advertisement be inserted, this time for ninety days, and that it not be confined to local papers, but that engineering journals of wide circulation be employed. The committee still had a good word to say about the Fitzgerald bid regarding the character of the check deposited with it, using these words:

"While the Jackson bid is worthy of the most serious condemnation, in other cases, notably that of Fitzgerald, certain matters have been brought to our attention which may and possibly will prove that they, too, have been imposed upon by others."

Then, on Nov. 5, the advertisements for bids for a supply of water for Grand Rapids were ordered inserted for ninety days, with the provision that the Board of Public Works send all bids unopened to the City Council, and bids were received but not acted upon.

Then came the indictment of Salsbury in Chicago in February and his subsequent arrest and since then the City Council of Grand Rapids has lost all interest in the water supply matter.

The indictment of Salsbury by the grand jury of Cook County was brought about on the complaint of K. C. Barton of Omaha, a son of Guy Barton of that city, a wealthy man, who had recently retired from business on the absorption of the Grant smelter, of which he was a large owner, by the smelter trust. Barton, it was said, had been approached by C. E. Loss, a contractor, who represented to him that it was possible to secure the extremely profitable contract of building the water supply plant for the Grand Rapids water works if $50,000 could be advanced for "promotion expenses."

Money Placed in Chicago Vault.

Salsbury, according to the story, was sent for and convinced Barton that the contract could be secured, and the latter agreed to put up the money, which he deposited in cash in a box in the vaults of the Illinois Trust and Savings Bank in Chicago, which Salsbury had rented under the name of "Wood."

Barton has supposed that this money was to be under his control until the contract was awarded, and was surprised one day when he went to the bank and found not only that the box was under Salsbury's control, but that the money had been taken away. Then Barton consulted an attorney, who at once took him before the grand jury of Cook County and had Salsbury indicted on a charge of embezzlement.

Many tales are told here of the way in which Salsbury had to skirmish around the city to get the $20,000 together again, and they will also be heard before the grand jury.

The story told in Chicago on Feb. 20 last, when Salsbury and the $50,000 returned to Chicago and met Barton, his lawyer, and the detectives in the Grand Pacific Hotel, was that he had returned the money and all matters were declared square.

The story told here, however, is that Salsbury did not return the money, or, at least, not all of it. Some rumors say the sum paid back to Barton was $30,000, and that was the reason Salsbury was delivered over to the Criminal Court and forced to give bonds for the detective agency which had the case in charge. Mr. Barton, however, said he had his money, and it is not the Barton case which the grand jury, which is to meet on Monday, is expected to take up, more than the incidental hearings which it may have on the subject matter of the inquiry.

The case which Prosecuting Attorney Ward intends to bring before the grand jury for its investigation is that of the Fitzgerald bid, which came so nearly going through last October. David Fitzgerald, who figured in the matter here, was simply a contractor, as Loss was in the Barton matter, and the real man behind him was named Taylor, a resident of New York City, and the grandson of a former millionaire of that city, of whose estate he is trustee.

According to the evidence in the Prosecuting Attorney's hands, Fitzgerald went to Taylor, just as Loss went to Barton, with a story of a profitable contract which it took $100,000 to secure, and Taylor advanced the money. This is supposed to be the explanation of the worthless $100,000 check, certified by Edmund Schmidt & Co., and concerning which the Council committee was charitable enough to suppose that Fitzgerald "had been imposed upon by others."

Tell of a Fund of $100,000.

That Taylor advanced $100,000 is believed here by the prosecution to be susceptible of clear proof, but that it was used to guarantee the bid of Fitzgerald on the contract is not. The theory on which the prosecution is working is that instead of the $100,000 being used as a deposit to guarantee the fulfillment of the contract, if awarded, that the worthless check was sent along with the bid, and the money placed "where it would do the most good."

That Mr. Inmann, the engineer who was out here in the interest of the Fitzgerald contract, was sincere in his belief that there was plenty of money back of the Fitzgerald bid is granted on all sides, and the theory of the prosecution is that Mr. Taylor is simply $100,000 out, just as Mr. Barton would have been $50,000 out had he not secured the indictment of Salsbury in Chicago.

The attempt now being made by the prosecution is to have Taylor come here and testify. He has secured a partial promise from him he will, and his evidence is awaited with interest.

Another reason why the Fitzgerald instead of the Barton case has been decided upon as the basis of the prosecution is that the dealings with Barton were all outside of the State of Michigan, and there is a question as to the jurisdiction of the courts of this State in the matter. Besides that, Barton has either got his money back, or says he has, and he cannot be brought here as a witness without his consent.

Expect to Prove "Boodling."

In the Fitzgerald case the situation is different. The Council, while not awarding the contract, showed every disposition to do so, and in the minds of well-informed people here would have done so had it not been for the delay caused by the discovery of the character of the certified check and the explosion followed the indictment of Salsbury in Chicago and the subsequent revelations. After that nothing could have been done, as the community had become too thoroughly wrought up.

That Taylor did, however, give $100,000 into the hands of third parties, in the expectation of getting what would have proven to be a most valuable contract, is expected to be proven by the State. A contract to supply Grand Rapids with water at the rate of $24 a million gallons, simply for pumping it from Lake Michigan to this city, a distance of twenty miles, with no hills to climb or tunnel, would generally be considered a good one. Grand Rapids is now a city of 90,000 inhabitants and rapidly growing.

That the money, or a large part of it, got to Grand Rapids after a preliminary conference in Detroit is also claimed to be susceptible of proof which the grand jury will listen to. What was done with it in Grand Rapids is the thing to which the prosecution is now paying all its attention, and the promise is that the point will be made clear before the grand jury is done. It may be remarked incidentally that Taylor, like the Bartons of Omaha, is a wealthy man not in active business.

The project of advancing money for "promoting" a contract to be awarded by a City Council, to be used before the contract was let, is one which would horrify any promoter who ever did business with the City Council of Chicago in the good old days when franchises were for sale. The custom then, as in all well-regulated "boodle" transactions, was to hold the money in escrow until the deal was completed. After the franchise was passed and signed by the Mayor or passed over his veto so the matter was entirely clinched, the money was released for distribution. Prosecuting Attorney Ward expects to show a different practice has prevailed in Grand Rapids.

Suspicion of Citizens Aroused.

From its inception the water works deal was viewed with suspicion here, the thinking men of the city not regarding it as a good bargain for the city. Still, it stood every prospect of going through the Council until on Feb. 21 came the news that Salsbury had been indicted in Chicago on complaint of K. C. Barton. The name of "Wood," under which the box in the vaults of the Illinois Loan and Trust company had been rented, was also mentioned in the dispatches as an alias, and Salsbury declared solemnly he was not the man described and it was all a mistake.

Two days afterwards Salsbury went to Chicago with a detective to meet Barton and took the $50,000, or a part of it, with him. According to the story told here, Salsbury explained to Barton in Chicago that the matter would have been all right and there would have been no trouble about the contract had it not been at the last minute that Representative Burns of this district had so amended a bill before the Legislature as to make it impossible to carry through the deal. The bill, as given to Burns, simply gave the Board of Public Works of Grand Rapids authority to lease or purchase a pure water supply for the city, the power then possessed by the City Council. Burns had, however, tacked on an amendment making it necessary that the lease or purchase be ratified by a vote of the people of the city. This killed the value of the bill for commercial purposes.

Representative Burns, in speaking of the matter, said:

"The bill was given me by a resident of Grand Rapids at the close of the session with a request that I get it through. I looked at it and saw it was an important thing, and so I put in the referendum clause. Who gave it to me I do not care to say, but he remarked that the referendum killed it."

Representative Burns will be asked to give his caller's name to the grand jury.

Petition for a Grand Jury.

While City Attorney Salsbury was in Chicago giving bail a petition was drawn up and generally signed by the better class of citizens asking the Judges of the Circuit Court to call a grand jury to investigate the matters relating to the water works contract. The law in Michigan is different from that in other States, and a grand jury is not necessary unless a Judge of the Circuit Court thinks one desirable. Ordinary criminal cases are first taken before a magistrate, who, if he finds probable cause, presents the accused to the Criminal Court, and a grand jury is not necessary. This (Kent) county is an old one, but it never had a grand jury in the State courts in its history. The Federal courts also formerly followed the State practice, but after the Supreme Court of the United States freed Joe Mackin and Gallagher in Chicago because they had been convicted in the United States District Court of ballot-box stuffing without having been presented by a grand jury they went back to the grand jury habit.

Then the Council passed the resolutions calling for a grand jury, and also ordered all bids for the construction of the water supply plant sent back without being opened.

This was on Feb. 26, but no grand jury was called and nothing seemed likely to be done, about this time Wesley W. Hyde, a member of the law firm of Hyde, Earle & Thornton, a former United States District Attorney, and a man who stands well in the community, went to Chicago and had a talk with the heads of the Civic federation and the Citizens' association. When he came back he organized the Civic club, of which he was elected President. James R. Wylie, cashier of the City National Bank, was made Vice President; Fred P. Wilcox, a retired and public-spirited business-man, chairman of the Committee on Administration; and the business and professional men of the city who stood the best in the estimation of the community made up the membership.

Civic Club Takes a Hand.

The Civic club began looking into the matter of the scandals connected with the water supply contract, and Charles E. Ward, the Assistant Prosecuting Attorney, took the matter up, but everything was quiet until last Tuesday. Then something happened.

The night before the Council had met, and part of its work was to elect a City Attorney. Politically the Council stands thirteen Republicans and eleven Democrats, and Salsbury is a Democrat. An attempt had been made to indorse him for reelection at a caucus of the Democratic Aldermen, but the attempt had failed because Alderman Joseph C. Shinkman, a Democrat, refused to attend, saying he was afraid it would declare for Salsbury, and while he was a good Democrat he would not obey the caucus if it declared for him. So the Democratic caucus was abandoned.

In the meantime the thirteen Republican Aldermen, forming a majority of the Council, held a caucus and voted to support Sybrant Wessilius, a young lawyer and a member of one of the Holland Dutch families with whom this community is so largely peopled. The election of Wessilius seemed assured.

When the Council met, however, it was voted that the matter should be decided by secret ballot, that having been the agreement made in the Republican caucus, and on the first ballot Salsbury had twelve votes, there were four blank, six were scattering, and Wessilius had two. On the second ballot Salsbury had fourteen votes and was elected.

Exactly how many Republicans voted for Salsbury has not yet been determined, but it must have been four, more probably five, and perhaps six. It is certain that Alderman Shinkman, one of the eleven Democrats, did not vote for him; no one believes that Alderman Johnson, another Democrat, did, and there are strong reasons to believe that Alderman Donovan, still another Democrat, did not.

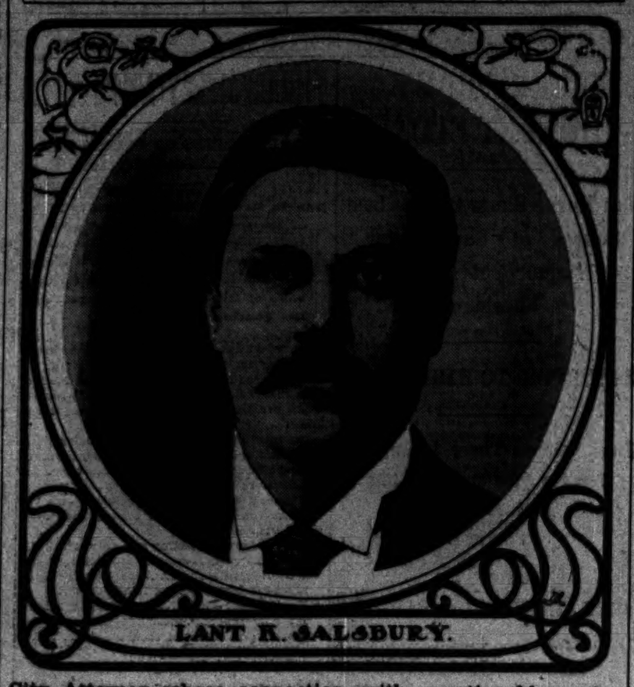

That Salsbury got Republican votes is a certainty, and the question all Grand Rapids has been asking ever since is: "What mysterious power did Salsbury exercise over these Republican Aldermen to force them to vote for him for City Attorney under the circumstances, and when they had a reputable candidate of their own?"

Other Work Is Tied Up.

In the meantime the reelection has caused other trouble. There are several projects on tap here, in which the Mayor, who has in the main been friendly to Salsbury, is interested, and which require the voting of bonds by the people to put them through. Mayor Perry is asking $100,000 for river improvement purposes, and there are other similar projects. It is well established, however, that the citizens of Grand Rapids never will vote for the expenditure of any money by an administration of which Salsbury is the City Attorney, and the story out today is that Mayor Perry will compel Salsbury to resign the place, in order to make things more pleasant.

Salsbury declares he will stick, but Wessilius has procured the signatures of all the Republican members of the Council to an agreement that they will vote for him in case of a vacancy, and after the storm aroused last Tuesday by the election of Salsbury it is not thought they will go back on the agreement this time.

TROLLEYS CAUSE DEATH AND PANIC

One Collides with Wagonload of Merrymakers, Killing Two of Them.

NONE ESCAPES INJURY.

Announced That Pennsylvania Company Is Back of North River Bridge.

GENERAL NEWS OF GOTHAM.

NEW YORK BUREAU CHICAGO TRIBUNE, New York, May 12.

Trolley Runs Into Wagon-Load of Merrymakers.

Two persons killed, many injured, and terror and panic were the results of two trolley car accidents near this city last night and today. One occurred at Jamaica, L. I., and the other near Englewood, N. J. In the former two men were killed and twenty-six young men and women injured. In the latter more than one hundred were injured, but no one was killed.

Of twenty-six young people who started from College Point, L. I., last night on what is locally known as a "starlight" ride, two were carried home this morning dead, five are in the hospital, four were allowed to leave the hospital after having their wounds dressed, and every one of the remainder was more or less bruised. A collision with a trolley car caused the accident. The dead are Michael Schneir and Joseph Pickel.

The merrymakers were on their way to a hotel ten miles away, where they were to have a dance. They were all in one wagon, the bottom of which had been filled with straw.

It was almost midnight when they reached Distler's Hotel, on the edge of Jamaica. When in front of the house the driver of the wagon tried to cross the tracks of a trolley line in front of an approaching car, but the car struck the rear of the wagon. The vehicle was demolished. Pickel was hurled into the air and fell thirty feet away, his head striking a fire hydrant. Schneir was also thrown into the air and landed head first on the macadam pavement. Both died in a short time.

Miss Mattie Debovise sustained a severe contusion of the chest and hips and was the worst hurt among the injured. The car itself was badly wrecked, but none of the twenty-five passengers was injured.

The motorman was arrested, though claiming to be without blame in the matter.

Loaded Trolley Car Runs Away Down a Hill.

Loaded with 115 passengers from the New York ferry, an open trolley car ran away down the Leonia Hill near Englewood, N. J., this afternoon, upset at the bottom of the hill, where there is a sharp turn, and threw its entire load out. Strangely, no one was killed, and only three persons were seriously hurt, but no one in the whole carload except the motorman escaped without a bruise. The more seriously injured were Frank Sunstuck, the conductor, and Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Robinson of New York. Conductor Sunstuck is suffering from internal injuries.

From Fort Lee the road ascends to the summit of the hill at Leonia Heights. Here the car waited for the car bound for the ferry to pass eastward. The car which met with the accident was there overtaken by a second car.

As the car started down the decline Motorman Newton appeared to have it well in hand. It had gone but a short distance when it appeared to get entirely away from his control and shot down the hill. Whether the brake failed to work or what has not been definitely ascertained.

As the car attained speed the passengers became frightened. Women screamed, and some tried to jump off. Men held the women on the car and there was great excitement. It did not last long; the flight down the hill took but a few seconds. At the foot of the hill the road curves sharply to the right.

When the front trucks hit the curve they started around it and made it. The rear ones followed part of the way. The wrench upon the car, however, as it swung about was so great that the body was lifted and torn from the trucks and rolled over on the ground. Motorman Newton stuck to the car, and when the jerk which pulled the car apart took place he shot into the air and landed in soft earth.

The passengers were caught in and under the car, and were piled in a struggling heap. There was help at hand, and in a few minutes fully a score of persons were laid upon the grass. Most of these were women, and when the rescuers had time to turn their attention to anything beyond getting all from the car it was found that many who had not anything worse than slight bruises were in a faint. They were revived quickly.

Loaned Money to Build Bridge.

The International Power company has just closed an order for a number of locomotives for the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fé railway, calling for the entire capacity of its plant for the remainder of this year. These locomotives will be built in Providence, R. I., and Paterson, N. J.

Pennsylvania Back of North River Bridge.

William J. Amend, counsel for the North River Bridge company and one of its directors, today is said to have made the definite announcement that the Pennsylvania railroad is back of the company's scheme to build a bridge from Hoboken to Manhattan. He said that contracts were now being negotiated between the bridge company and the various railroad companies whose traffic will be accommodated by the bridge. As soon as these could be executed, he said, work on the structure would be commenced. It is estimated that the bridge can be completed within four years.

The bridge is to be only for the transportation of passengers, and the plan involves the erection of an enormous terminal, bounded by Sixth and Seventh avenues, Twenty-fourth and Twenty-eighth streets.

The bridge will be the largest in the world. There will be sixteen track for railroad trains, and the strength of the structure will be such that they can be run at full speed. Above them will be trolley tracks, driveways, bicycle paths, and footways.

The estimated cost of the bridge, with its approaches and the passenger terminal, is $50,000,000.

Only half a dozen of the 50,000 persons who visited Coney Island today were venturesome enough to enter the water. These six were the first of the season, and their appearance excited great interest along the beach. A single arrest was made for drunkenness. The eighty policemen detailed to the resort had little to do.

Firemen of Ozone Park in Mutiny.

The volunteer firemen of Ozone Park, Queens Borough, mutinied today. The chief ordered them to appear for drill in full uniform. They didn't consider it necessary to inform the chief that they had concluded not to obey his orders. The hour passed, and they did not come. After waiting until his patience was exhausted, the chief sent to Ozone Park to find out why Americus company had not responded, and his messengers returned with the information that the house was closed and the majority of the members were at church. The firemen say they want rest on Sunday.

As soon as Dr. Parkhurst's morning sermon was over in the Madison Square Presbyterian Church some persons started to leave the church. Some did go out. Dr. Parkhurst spoke up good and loud, and said he would say to those who were leaving that the services were not over until the benediction had been pronounced.

Compares Stock Boom with Law Bubble.

In a sermon on "Wealth," delivered in the Church of the Divine Paternity today, Dr. Charles H. Eaton recalled the financial bubble, originated by John Law, the Scotch Controller General, of the finances of France, which burst in 1720, spreading ruin throughout the country, and said the conditions of that panic and the conditions prevalent in New York last week were much the same. Both the frenzies with all their dire results were the result of a great desire on the part of the people to achieve wealth without any adequate return in either body, brain, or will.

"No minister," he continued, "who understands the present state of morality and religious growth and yet feels the spirit of the times moving within him, can afford at this time to indulge in cant concerning the acquisition of wealth."

Theatrical Treasurer Arrested on Disorderly Charge.

Herman H. Hauser, treasurer at Koster & Bial's, was locked up tonight on a charge of disorderly conduct preferred by Joseph M. Evanson, treasurer of a theatrical company. Policeman Donovan found the men fighting in the street. Evanson declared Hauser, who, he said, was intoxicated, was trying to force an entrance into his apartments. Hauser was, therefore, locked up and Evanson was allowed to go. Hauser two years ago jumped from the Brooklyn bridge. He was returning from Coney Island and was about the center of the bridge when a little girl sitting beside him said to her father: "Papa, I wish I could see a man jump from the bridge."

"All right, little girl, I'll jump off for you," said Hauser, and before he could be prevented he leaped from the car, then to the rail, and from there to the East River. He was rescued by a passing tug.

Schwab Denounced as a Falsifier by Labor Union Men.

Charles M. Schwab, President of the United States Steel corporation, was denounced today at the meeting of the Central Federated union for his remarks before the Industrial commission at Washington regarding organized labor. Mr. Schwab stated before the commission that no business could prosper that was subject to the dictation of a labor organization, and that a man was handicapped by being a member of a labor union. Mr. Schwab also testified before the commission that the average wages paid by the Carnegie company had been greater in every year than in 1892.

The subject was brought up by Delegate Kelly of the Theatrical Protective union. He declared that Mr. Schwab has slandered organized labor.

"He ought to be in the Committee of Fifteen," continued Kelly; "then he could have a chance for slandering everybody."

William J. O'Brien of the Granite Cutters, who is on the Committee of Fifteen, said the committee would have nothing to do with Mr. Schwab. Mr. Schwab, he said, made irresponsible statements about labor. In fact, he said, the statements were lies. The labor organizations did not destroy individuality and they raised the minimum of wages.

Stenographer Marries Through "Ad" and Repents.

Gertrude Verende, a stenographer who had $1,000 saved, besides an annuity left her by an aunt, read an advertisement of a man, "rich, handsome, kind, and gentle, sin," to make his life one of happiness. Gertrude thought she could fill the bill. The advertiser, who was "Dr." George Mueller, thought so, too, and they were married. They lived on her money. When the money was gone, Mueller went, too. Gertrude found him after a long search in Paterson, N. J., where he had a massage establishment. She also found another woman, who said that Mueller had married her, too. Further investigation revealed the fact that he had another alleged wife, who had just sailed for Germany. Gertrude and the second Mrs. Mueller have brought charges of bigamy against Mueller.

Dr. Stires Attends Service at St. Thomas'.

Bishop Jagger, the head of the Diocese of Southern Ohio, preached at St. Thomas' Church this morning.

His sermon commemorated the seventy-sixth anniversary of the American Tract society. The Rev. Dr. E. M. Stires of Chicago, who has been called to succeed the late Dr. John Wesley Brown, was one of those who worshiped in the church. At the close of the sermon he was introduced to many of the members of the congregation. Dr. Stires has not yet formally replied to the invitation of the vestry, although it is understood that he will accept the call extended to him.

Will Arrest Sunday Ball Players.

Brasil, Ind., May 12.—[Special.]—The opening ball game of the season at the new fair grounds this afternoon between Brasil and Benwood attracted 2,000 spectators. Brasil won by a score of 8 to 4. Pastors and church workers declare that this will be the last game of ball played here on Sunday. They had committees at the game today taking notes, and tomorrow they will cause the arrest of the players and managers.

JACKSONVILLE REFUGEE ILL.

Man from Florida Town Said to Be Sick with Fever in Illinois Town.

Springfield, Ill., May 12.—[Special.]—A message received tonight by Dr. J. A. Egan, Secretary of the State Board of Health, from Gardner, Grundy County, stated that a stranger recently arrived from Jacksonville, Fla., was ill at that place with symptoms of yellow fever. Dr. Egan answered that it would be well to keep the suspect under surveillance during developments, but says he thinks it probable that the case is dengue.

MRS. M'KINLEY ILL; HALTS TRIP.

President Takes His Wife to San Francisco, Where She Can Secure Quiet.

MUST HAVE LONG REST.

Executive Will Not Rejoin Cabinet Officers Until Her Condition Improves.

OTHERS TO CONTINUE TOUR.

San Francisco, Cal., May 12.—[Special.]—The President and Mrs. McKinley arrived in San Francisco this afternoon, two days ahead of the scheduled time, as a result of the sudden illness of the Executive's wife, necessitating absolute rest and special medical attention. It is a matter of doubt whether the program for the week can be carried out, even in part, as the President will not rejoin the party until Mrs. McMKinley's health shows much improvement.

At least one week of rest and quiet will be necessary before Mrs. McKinley can resume the trip, according to Dr. Rixey, the President's physician. However, should his wife continue the progress made since arriving in this city, President McKinley will meet the Cabinet officers at San José and return to this city at the hour originally planned for his arrival.

At Home of Henry T. Scott.

The state of Mrs. McKinley's health was such this morning that the President decided to leave Del Monte and bring his wife to this city immediately, to the home of Henry T. Scott, where she could have complete rest, and where a specialist could be consulted if necessary.

A special train of two cars and a locomotive was made up from the President's special, and at 12:30 o'clock the President, Mrs. McKinley, Miss Barber, the President's niece, Secretary Cortelyou and wife, Dr. Rixey, and H. T. Scott started from Del Monte for San Francisco, leaving the remainder of the Presidential party at Del Monte. Only a few hundred persons greeted the President upon his arrival in this city. His coming was not known generally, and only those who chanced to see the bulletins posted by the newspapers announcing that the President would reach the city at 4 p. m. awaited his train.

Avoid Crowd at Central Depot.

The President, in order to avoid the crowd that was expected to assemble at the depot at Third and Townsend streets, left the train with his little party at Valencia street, a station in the southern part of the city. When the train, consisting of the locomotive, tender, a baggage car, and the President's special coach, stopped at Valencia street, Mrs. McKinley was carried in a steamer chair by two colored porters from the private car to a closed carriage in waiting. She was heavily veiled and the President and Dr. Rixey followed close behind. Mrs. McKinley was placed in the carriage and the President and Dr. Rixey took seats in the same vehicle. The President was pale and looked worried. The rest of the party followed in carriages. Mr. and Mrs. Scott had arrived at their residence ahead of the President and were waiting to receive their distinguished guests. Mrs. McKinley was again lifted out of the carriage and placed in an invalid chair and carried into the house.

Mrs. McKinley Seems Quite Ill.

Secretary Cortelyou, when questioned concerning Mrs. McKinley's condition, stated that there was nothing alarming in her present indisposition and that perfect quiet and rest for a few days would restore her to her usual health. It is the impression, however, of those who saw Mrs. McKinley that she is quite ill and that her present state of health may result in an entire change of the President's program.

Should Mrs. McKinley's health improve the President will carry out his intention to attend the celebration at San José tomorrow. If, however, her condition tomorrow is no better than today, the President will not leave his wife's side, but will allow the Cabinet officers and others of his party to represent him at San José.

Dr. Rixey Issues a Bulletin.

At 6 o'clock tonight Dr. Rixey made the following statement:

"Mrs. McKinley stood the trip from Del Monte much better than I expected. Her condition is not serious. She will stay here at least a week and have perfect rest. I think by that time she will be able to continue the journey. She has been gaining strength all afternoon."

Bruised Hand Causes Suffering.

Mrs. McKinley bruised her hand when the train was rounding a curve, and after leaving New Orleans a bone felon appeared upon her finger. Her hand became swollen and gave her considerable pain, causing fever, which prevented her from sleeping. Dr. Rixey lanced the felon twice and gave her some relief in that way. Mrs. McKinley bore it all bravely and urged continually that the program at the cities and towns en route should not be modified in any particular on her account.

It was hoped that the rest at Del Monte would do her good, but Mrs. McKinley slept little that night and this morning. Although her condition had improved, she reluctantly agreed to go to San Francisco at once. The party got away from the hotel so quietly that many of the guests did not know until evening that the President and Mrs. McKinley had gone.

Patient Resting Comfortably.

At 9:30 o'clock tonight Secretary Cortelyou gave the following bulletin:

"Mrs. McKinley stood the trip from Monterey extremely well and is resting comfortably at Mr. Scott's. Her attack of indigestion, it is believed, will yield promptly to rest and remedies, while the bone felon on her hand is healing nicely. Dr. Hirschfelder of San Francisco is in consultation with Dr. Rixey."

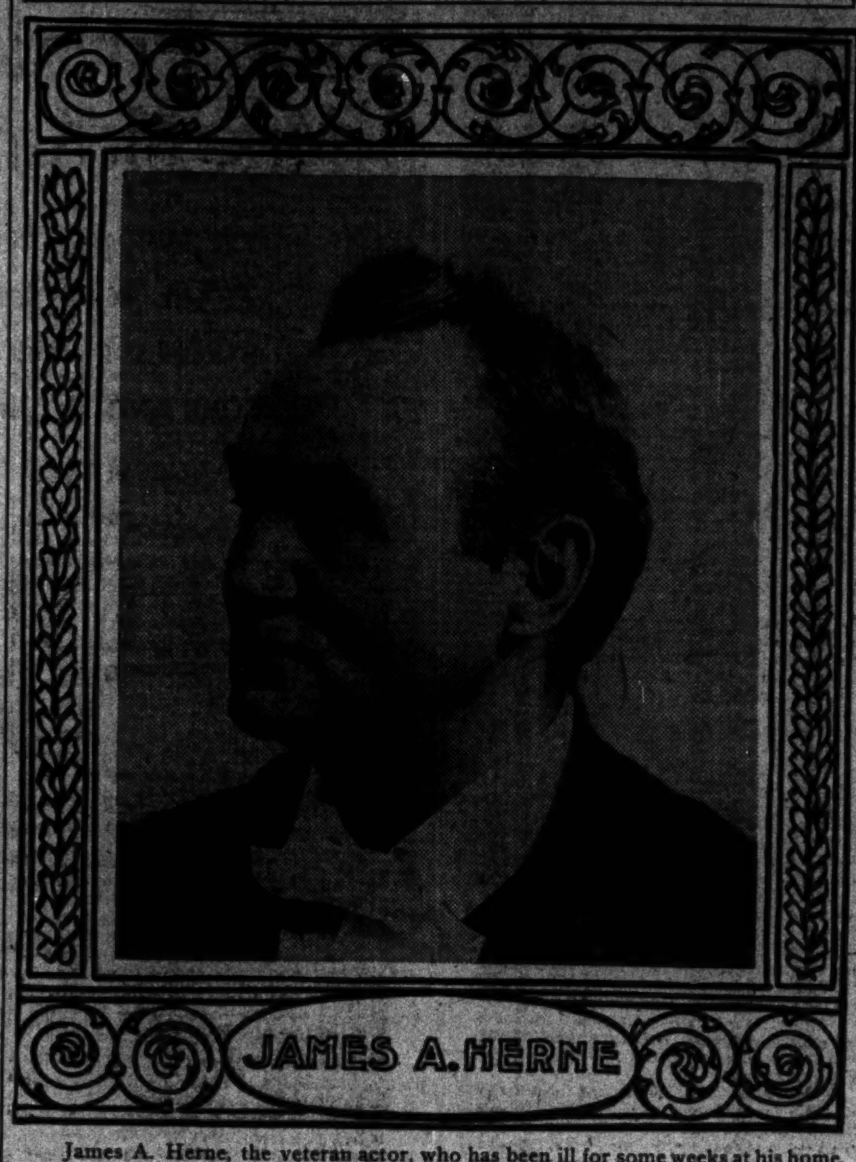

It will not be determined until 9 a. m. tomorrow whether President McKinley will go to San José or remain in this city. His program for the day will be contingent on the condition of Mrs. McKinley at that hour.

Rest of Party to Follow Schedule.

Del Monte, Cal., May 12.—Mrs. McKinley's illness cast a shadow on the other members of the party who remained here, and there was talk at first of abandoning the entire schedule between here and San Francisco, but Mrs. McKinley especially requested that the plans of the party should not be disarranged by her departure, and when the President left this morning the understanding was that the program originally fixed should be carried out. The President has himself said he would rejoin the party as soon as Mrs. McKinley was made comfortable.

The party is scheduled to leave here tomorrow morning at 8 o'clock, and after a ten minute stop at Pajaro to go to Santa Cruz for a glimpse of the big trees.

NOTED ACTOR, WHO IS DANGEROUSLY ILL.

James A. Herne, the veteran actor, who has been ill for some weeks at his home, 79 Convent avenue, in this city, was said tonight to be somewhat improved. He is suffering from pleuro-pneumonia, resulting from a cold taken about six weeks ago, and his family and friends are anxious over his condition, which has been critical for some days.

EX-POLICEMAN ROSS DEAD

HELD ALL PLACES IN DEPARTMENT SAVE THAT OF CHIEF.

Conspicuous and Popular in Down-Town District on Account of His Great Stature—As Captain and Inspector He Fostered Idea of Having the Largest Men Physically Guard the Crowded Crossings—Active in Cronin Case.

Alexander S. Ross, former Assistant General Superintendent of Police, and a conspicuous figure in the down-town district while a member of the department, is dead. He expired yesterday at his house, 233 Paulina street, while surrounded by the members of his family and a few friends. The immediate cause of death was pneumonia, and while he had been in poor health for some time the end was not expected, and its announcement was a shock to his former associates on the force—and to the many friends who had known him as a physical giant and an intrepid policeman. He recently was under the surgeon's knife. The operation was considered a fatal one, but he survived it, and was recovering, but was too weak to combat the ravages of pneumonia.

Mr. Ross served in every capacity in the Police department except that of Chief. He was promoted rapidly from a patrolman each time for meritorious work. His last position was that of Assistant General Superintendent. While stationed at the Central detail as Captain he fostered and gave impetus to the movement to have the largest men physically on the force transferred to the down-town district, and it was during his régime that Chicago's crossing guardians were famed the world over as the finest appearing men in police service anywhere.

Active in Cronin Case.

Ross took an active part in the police work of the Cronin murder case, one of his duties being to bring Martin Burke to Chicago from Winnipeg, Manitoba, after the long legal battle there over extradition. He was severely injured at La Salle and Washington streets while leading a detachment of police to disperse bread rioters in 1891. Later he was the principal adviser of Chief of Police Badenoch from 1895 to 1897.

Mr. Ross joined the police force in June, 1882, as a patrolman. He was soon transferred to the Central detail, and on account of meritorious conduct during the Haymarket troubles in 1886 was promoted sergeant. In June of the same year he was made Lieutenant, and in 1891 was made Captain and assigned to the Central detail. During the same year he was again promoted and made Inspector of the Third Police Division. On the retirement of Chief of Detectives Marsh he was made Inspector in command of the detective department. In 1893 Mayor Harrison made him Inspector of the First Police Division.

Assistant Chief in 1895.

When Mayor Hopkins succeeded to the unexpired term of the elder Harrison, he removed Ross from the force in January, 1894. The policeman then accepted the work of reorganizing the force of the Town of Cicero and remained there until 1895, when he was reinstated in the Police department as Assistant General Superintendent, retaining that position until removed by the present Mayor in 1897.

Ross was born in Rosshire, Scotland, in 1857, and did his first police work as a provincial detective in Ontario, Canada. His immediate survivors are his widow, three brothers, and three sisters. They are W. J. and Kenneth Ross of this city, Duncan C. Ross of Orangeville, N. Y., Mrs. Robert Loughran, Mrs. McKenzie, and Mrs. Annan, also of this city. Arrangements for the funeral have not been made.

Two Boys Run Down by Horses.

James Suter, 14 years old, was run over by a buggy at Twelfth street and Center avenue yesterday. The horse was driven by William G. Bangart, 1019 West Taylor street. The boy was removed to his home, 506 West Twelfth street. Henry Dorsky, 3 years old, living at 622 Sangamon street, ran in front of a horse driven by Samuel Rissman, 14 Solon place, at Sangamon and Maxwell streets. The vehicle passed over the child's abdomen. A doctor stated that he did not believe the victim would recover.

MAYOR TO APPOINT BOARD

WILL SEND FOUR NAMES TO COUNCIL THIS EVENING.

Men Selected to Take Charge of Special Assessment Levies—Chief Swenie to Be Left Undisturbed for the Present—List of Bridgetenders and Justices of the Peace to Be Presented—Aldermen to Act on Railway Commission Resolution.

Mayor Harrison will send to the City Council tonight the names of four men, who, with Superintendent John A. May of the Bureau of Special Assessments, will constitute the new Board of Local Improvements. The making of the appointments is conditional upon the passage of an ordinance creating the board, and this has been assumed as certain. The Mayor has selected and notified the men whom he will appoint. They are:

B. F. Rogers. Andrew M. Lynch.
Ernest McGaffey. Albert Schonbeck.

The salary for the new offices is $4,000 a year. Mr. Rogers is a real estate agent and a member of the Board of Education. Mr. Schonbeck also is a real estate agent, with offices at 705, 108 Dearborn street. His residence is at 1870 Melrose avenue. Mr. McGaffey is an assistant in the City Clerk's office and also a member of the law firm of David, Smulski & McGaffey. Mr. Lynch is the head of the firm of A. M. Lynch & Co., commission merchants, at 10 Pacific avenue.

Bridge Tenders and Justices.

In addition to these appointments the Mayor will have his appointments of bridgetenders and justices of the peace. It is not thought that the appointment of Fire Marshal will be made. The Mayor said that nothing would be done with this office at present.

The Council may revive the street railway commission at tonight's session, but it is more probable that action on the report of the Committee on Rules recommending the reëstablishment of the commission will not be acted upon until the following session. The ordinance, introduced by Alderman Foreman, will be recommended for passage by the committee, but it will be so amended that its passage will not be a slap at the Mayor. Instead of taking the appointment of the nine members of the commission out of the hands of the Mayor, as the original Foreman resolution did, it gives him the selection of the Aldermen.

Cost of Improving Halsted Street.

Alderman Brennan will begin action looking to the improvement of Halsted street by introducing an order calling for an estimate upon the cost of widening the street from Milwaukee avenue to Twenty-second street. It is thought that the great cost of the work will prevent its being accomplished.

Oppose Gas Company Offer.

To accept the offer of the People's Gaslight and Coke company, by which the company agrees to give the city free gas for street lighting, means, city officials say, the surrender of too many privileges on the part of the city. A subcommittee of the Finance committee, consisting of Aldermen Goldzier, Bennett, and Raymer, will consider the proposition made by the gas company.

"It would be to the disadvantage of the city to accept it," said Alderman Raymer, "and I believe the majority of the Council will regard it that way. It would set a precedent which the gas company could insist upon being followed. As it is a fact that the city is gradually getting away from dependence upon the company, it would be a bad precedent to set. With our own electric lighting system and the gasoline lamps it will not be long before the city furnishes all its own lights. When we reach that time the compensation obtained from the company in the form of a percentage of the gross receipts will be clear profit."

DR. AMENT TELLS OF SIEGE.

Pekin Missionary Speaks in Oak Park and Repeats Defense in Controversy with Mark Twain.

The Rev. William S. Ament of Pekin, China, made his first public appearance yesterday, when he spoke at the First Congregational Church of Oak Park and gave a history of his experiences in the Boxer uprising in China.

His controversy with Mark Twain was alluded to by the speaker only in an indirect way. Dr. Ament repeated his previous statement, that the controversy arose over a misunderstanding caused by the mistake of the operator who sent the cablegram. Dr. Ament admitted that an extra charge was made against the Chinese on the property lost, but said it was only one-third extra was charged instead of thirteen times the value of the property, as was stated in the message.

"The one and the three were in the message all right, but the operator was to blame for the blunder," said Dr. Ament. "This one-third was added not for the propagation of the gospel, but as a pension fund. This fund reached a total of $12,000 and yields about 50 cents interest a month for each widow and orphan of the dead native Christians, for whom no other restitution or reparation has been or will be made."

Dr. Ament will speak this noon at Central Y. M. C. A. Hall.

NEWS FROM CAPITAL CITY.

upon our inland seas. These ships, according to a letter received by the Treasury Bureau of Statistics from the manager of the company, are of the lake type of construction, but built with a special view to combination of lake and ocean traffic, and are supplied with special facilities for rapid loading and unloading. They pass necessarily through the Canadian canals, the Welland and St. Lawrence, to the head of the deep water navigation at Montreal, and will in their trip traverse seventy-three miles of canals and pass through forty-six locks, depending on their own propelling power throughout the entire voyage.

"It is estimated that the time occupied between Buffalo and Montreal, between which the canal system extends, will be about three days.

"Communications to the Bureau of Statistics from lake cities and ports express the hope that this enterprise may result in serious consideration of the proposition to construct, entirely within the United States, a deep water canal connecting the lakes with the Atlantic. The present depth of the Welland Canal is fourteen feet, and the depth of most of the harbors on the lakes is twenty feet, and it is evident that those desiring to see the cities located upon the great lakes made in fact Atlantic ports and connected by direct steamship lines with the great seaboard cities of the world will desire at least an American canal with a depth equal to that of the great lake harbors—viz.: twenty feet."

Twice the Traffic of Suez Carried by Canada Canal.

The tonnage and value of freight passing through the Sault Ste. Marie Canal in each year from 1887 to 1900 was enormous. When it is remembered that the traffic passing through this canal is double in amount that carried through the famous Suez Canal the importance of the American waterway will become apparent; while the fact that the Suez Canal has proved a paying investment to those investing in its stock readily suggests that a great waterway connecting the lake system with the Atlantic Ocean would be of great benefit to American commerce and rich in its rewards to American enterprise.

The following table gives the figures for the Sault Ste. Marie Canal.

Counterpart of Tom Reed Boatman at Pensacola.

"Tom Reed has a perfect counterpart, not only in name but in personal appearance, down in Pensacola, Fla.," said a Southern politician. While in Pensacola I was invited out for a sail on Pensacola Bay, and when waiting at the wharf for a start I noticed a portly person manning a small schooner coming alongside. 'Why,' I exclaimed in amazement, as he neared us, 'if that ain't Tom Reed I'll give it up.' 'Why, of course it is,' said my host, as he bartered for the price of a two hours' sail.

"I got into the boat looking at Reed, and my friend, wishing to do the polite thing, introduced him by calling out, 'Captain, allow me to introduce my friend Tom Reed.' I almost fell out of the boat, I was so surprised.

"Tom Reed never looked or sounded more like himself than at that moment, and, except for the Southern drawl, I would have thought it really was the ex-Speaker himself.

"A few questions brought out the explanation that the men so much alike in personal appearance as to be constantly mistaken for one another, and who bear the same name, are cousins. It is an everyday occurrence for tourists to make the mistake, and even men associated with the ex-Speaker in Congress are as easily duped into the belief that the politician has turned boatman as are those who have had only an occasional glimpse of him from the gallery of the House."

Powderly Wants New Laws on Naturalization.

For the purpose of preventing the abuses of the naturalization laws, Commissioner Powderly wants the scope of the Bureau of Immigration enlarged to embrace a record of departure of aliens and he desires legislation providing for the use of such data obtained by the immigration officials as would prevent the violation of those laws.

Mr. Powderly has recommended already that Congress enact legislation of this character. In discussing this subject Mr. Powderly used rather strong language. He said: "The naturalization of aliens, which should be one of the most important functions of somebody, now is left to nobody until the alien himself thinks fit, or some politician, who expects to think and vote for him, believes he should become a citizen. Then the courts are appealed to, but no other tribunal has anything to do or say in the matter."

The Commissioner believes the difficulty could be removed in a measure by requiring an alien, on his arrival, to say if it is his purpose ultimately to renounce allegiance to his own country and become an American citizen. If the alien answers in the affirmative, the Commissioner says, it should be made a matter of record which should be used at the expiration of the five years' residence required before naturalization papers are given. If, on the other hand, the alien declares it is not his intention to become naturalized he should be required to state his purpose in coming and this fact should be recorded.

"In either case," said Mr. Powderly, "the greatest care should be exercised in ascertaining his fitness to land."

Map of Niagara River Prepared for Buffalo Show.

A map of the Niagara River has just been issued by the geological survey and is to form part of the display of that department at the Pan-American exposition, where it is intended to give it away to visitors. The map itself is said to be one of the finest ever made by the department and has, accompanying it, an exhaustive and interesting account of the river by Dr. G. K. Gilbert, the distinguished geologist of the survey, who is considered the greatest living authority upon Niagara Falls and who began his study of it twenty years ago.

In speaking of the turbulent stream, the home of Niagara Falls, Dr. Gilbert says:

"Niagara River is the outlet of Lake Erie and flows northward thirty-four miles to Lake Ontario. The vertical descent from lake to lake is 327 feet. The average flow of water is 222,000 cubic feet per second. The river, turbulent as it is, is navigable from its head for a distance of seventeen miles to Chippewa, is broken by its descent to the falls, but again becomes navigable at Lewiston and from there to its mouth, a distance of seven miles, is open to navigation. It affords enormous water power, of which 5,000,000 horse-power is readily available, and 85,000 horse-power already has been utilized."

Dr. Gilbert says of the age of the river: "One may say with confidence that 7,000 years, the usual reckoning of the age of the river, is entirely too small, but whether the real age is expressible in tens of thousands or in hundreds of thousands of years is at present a matter of doubt."

This map is to form a part of the topographic atlas of the whole United States in course of preparation by the survey, the stupendous undertaking of which can be understood better when it is shown that twenty years already have been spent upon it, and it is still only one-third finished. A note printed upon the back of the map just mentioned says:

"Full information in regard to the atlas of the United States may be obtained by addressing the director of the survey." As this looks promising to the collectors of valuable public documents who always are greedy for their share they apply and look somewhat abashed to have put in an application twenty or thirty years ahead of an issue.

Chickweed the Chief Crop in White House Lawn.

"Keep off the chickweed," was the jocose remark of a tourist as he neared the Executive Mansion, and quite appropriate it was, for about fifteen of the nineteen acres of ground about the White House is turned over to the development of chickweed, and under the most careful cultivation a better crop could not be had. In fact, just now real grass, such as once filled the gardener's heart with pride, is scarcely to be found, save in stingy patches about the lawn.

Those in charge of the crop say that on the meager appropriation of less than $5,000 for the care and keeping of the nineteen acres and the large conservatories besides, it practically is impossible to keep down the rich harvest of chickweed and dandelions that have taken possession of the place. This money is supposed to pay all the men, except the head gardener, and keep up the conservatories and other expenses of the grounds.

A man with a country place of nineteen acres would not think $20,000 a bit too much for the care of his place, and yet a degree of perfection is expected in the grounds of the White House unequaled by any place of the same size in the country. It now would require a sum equal to the entire appropriation to rid the grounds of the weed. It grows fast and spreads prodigiously, and untiring effort is needed to keep it down.

The only hope for a crop of grass on the lawn this summer is a long, dry season. This will kill the chickweed, which thrives best in a moist, cool season, and give the grass some show.

What with egg rolling and summer concerts, the grounds have little chance at best, and these two events, arranged for the pleasure of the great unwashed, consume hundreds of dollars of the already pitiful allowance.

Three years ago the crop of chickweed and dandelion was small, and was let alone. Last year it became bad, and at long intervals a lone gardener would appear at some point on the nineteen acres with a basket, pocketknife, and a little hoe, and scratch indefinitely about. He must have become disheartened, for no one has been seen so far this spring, and the ragged appearance of the weed-sprinkled lawn and empty flower beds, along with the scaffolding, ladders, pails, and other things necessary for the spring house-cleaning, make the tourist look for a "to let" sign somewhere on the place.

Women Cooks in Demand Under Civil Service.

Women cooks are in great demand by the Civil Service commission just now, and this brings out the fact that the government affords a remarkably good compensation for uneducated women and places them under the protection of civil service at one and the same time. These cooks are nearly all women. Few of them can read and none of them is paid less than $35 a month and "keep," while from that the amount ranges as high as $540 a year.

However, few attain the larger figure, only about a half dozen being in the service at that price.

There are now ninety cooks under civil service and fifty assistant cooks. They are all employed at the Indian schools, where they cook for and instruct Indian girls in the art of civilized cookery. They manage the entire culinary department, attend to the buying, and so on.

One of the chief requirements is that a woman shall have practical experience in managing a household, and aside from what would be a "good character" for a cook in any ordinary walk of life, little else is required. Few of them are able to write their names, so they are not required to keep market accounts. The principal thing is to know what to cook, how to cook it, be able to impart this knowledge to the young Indians, and then have them do the work.

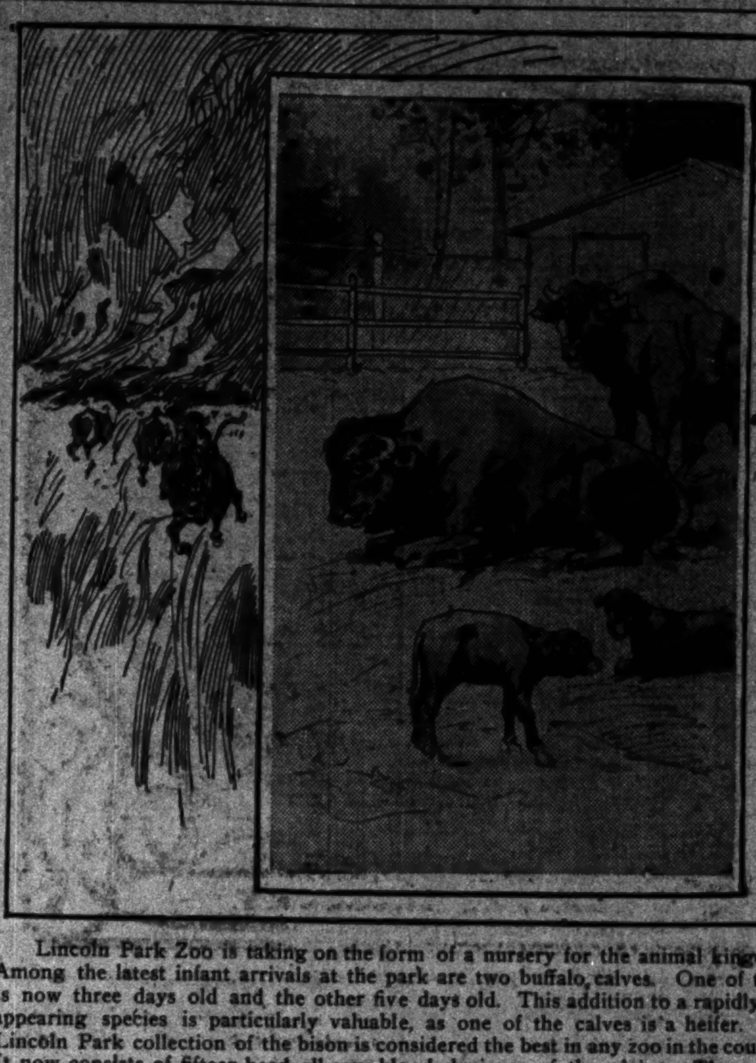

Carpenters, blacksmiths, and a few other of the trades make no educational requirements under the civil service, but this is about the only one open to a woman where she may sign a cross mark in lieu of her name.

YOUNG BUFFALOES IN LINCOLN PARK ZOO.

Lincoln Park Zoo is taking on the form of a nursery for the animal kingdom. Among the latest infant arrivals at the park are two buffalo calves. One of these is now three days old and the other five days old. This addition to a rapidly disappearing species is particularly valuable, as one of the calves is a heifer. The Lincoln Park collection of the bison is considered the best in any zoo in the country. It now consists of fifteen head, all pure blood denizens of the plains. There have been twenty head in the herd, but the park management has sold a few to other zoological collections. Detroit has two buffaloes, and there are three in Central Park, New York City. Other places have what are called buffaloes, but it is said the breed is not pure, thereby detracting from the value of the animals.

SOUNDS THE LEVEE'S DOOM

EFFECT OF TWO ORDERS BY CHIEF OF POLICE O'NEILL.

Prohibits Gambling in the District and Directs That Women Be Driven from Saloons — Will Clear the Way for Large Business Houses Which Are Said to Be Ready to Move in That Territory—Declares Ike Rosen Must Behave.

Within a few months, possibly within a shorter period, the glory of the levee may have passed away. This is a prediction, but it has more foundation than a weather prophecy. The chances are ten to one against the famous section of thuggery and outlawry which hugs closely to the south end of the city's business district. The residents of the levee who do not need a general order from the Police department to reach a conclusion admit this "from the drift of things."

The healing of the sore spot will mean the regeneration of South Clark street from Van Buren to Twelfth street. Van Buren street will be known no longer as the boundary line between decency and indecency. Large business houses, it is alleged, are about to claim the street, and will take it as soon as the passing of the levee is an assured fact.

Chief O'Neill's Two Orders.

Two orders of Chief of Police O'Neill to the department are used as the basis for these predictions. They are:

"No gambling shall be permitted."

"No women will be allowed in saloons."

With these two orders enforced there will be no levee. A beginning was made Saturday night, when the saloon and gambling-room of "Mushmouth" Johnson was raided, and later when the police swooped down on "Hank" Bergman's place.

"If the politicians can't stop it the levee is gone," was the comment of residents of the district, and it is not thought the politicians can stop it.

This is Chief O'Neill's third experience with the levee. His first was twenty-eight years ago, when he traveled a beat through it as a patrolman. His second was as a Captain of police, when he attempted to clean it out and did drive out the "panel houses." His third is as General Superintendent of Police.

Chief Free to Act.

"I have no inspectors over me now," he said.

The Chief does not promise he will make Clark street a model thoroughfare, but he thinks he can do something towards it. In attempting the cleaning out of the section he is confronted with the possibility of scattering the residents broadcast throughout the city, which would make things worse than they are at present, in his estimation. Residence districts already have begun to suffer, he said, from the efforts of the police to break up settlements down-town.

"If we drive them north, south, or west it will be worse," he said, "and we cannot drive them into the lake."

To push them just a little south and then enforce the two orders which have been mentioned is thought to be the best compromise. Property-owners will aid the Chief, he thinks. With their present tenants the property is not paying, they allege.

"I have been told by men who own property there," said the Chief, "that they do not even get enough in rents to pay their taxes. One man said he lacked $50 of enough money last year. And yet they ask, if they do not rent to the character of people who now live there, whom can they find for tenants? Who else will rent the rotten, shaky structures? They are anxious for other tenants.

"Get some large warehouses in the district and that will do as much as police vigilance to regenerate the street. A park would help, but no park could be maintained there. You can't have vegetation in smoke and acids. You might have a playground, and that would be another aid. Already a large printing establishment has been built in the section. It probably will be followed by others.

Will Drive Women from Streets.

"I cannot go in bodily and clean out this place. I have detailed six policemen to watch for gambling, and as rapidly as I get their reports raids will follow. I will not tolerate women in saloons. I will not have women walking the streets. As much as can be done by enforcing these orders will be accomplished. Robberies in saloons and houses will have to stop. We do not intend to call draw poker gambling. That is played right in Hyde Park, and I do not propose to attempt to stop it. Where the house gets a 'rake-off' it will be gambling, and places will be raided for this offense."

Says Rosen Must Obey Orders.

Ike Rosen, whose license was revoked and restored by the Mayor, must change the character of his place. Since he permits women to gather within his saloon he comes under the provisions of the new orders.

"Rosen must keep a decent saloon or he will not be allowed to keep it open," said the Chief, which indicated that the incident was not "closed."

REAR NEW CITY WITHIN CHICAGO

Building Boom, Now at Its Height, Extends to All Sections of the Town.

MILLIONS GO FOR LABOR.

Big and Little Flats, Cottages, and Skyscrapers Springing Up at Every Point.

SEE RETURN OF OLD SPIRIT.

A city is being reared within a city in Chicago just now. While two great office buildings and a mammoth mercantile structure are under way in the down-town district, in the outlying sections enough buildings are being raised to house the people of the metropolis of almost any Western State. In these smaller structures, ranging from the $75,000 residence to the $2,000 cottage, real estate men see a revival of the spirit that has made Chicago great.

In round numbers $6,000,000 is being invested in new structures, say architects and others who have kept track of the improvements now under way. Of this sum $3,700,000 is being expended within the union loop on three structures. The remaining $2,700,000 is devoted to the lesser buildings, of which no section of the city is without its quota.

The buildings which will exceed $25,000 in cost foot up $1,900,000. These include residences and apartment houses and store buildings. The remaining $800,000, say the architects, is largely devoted to less pretentious residences and cottages.

Work Swamps the Architects.

With a revival of the building boom—an activity that waited only on more settled labor conditions—the architects find themselves unable to keep up with their work, and contractors are giving employment to all who ask for work. During the building trades strike many workmen left the city, and, say the contractors, this has so reduced Chicago's army of artisans that before the summer is over it is likely that workmen will be called from other cities to carry on the building.

The three great structures on which work has been begun, either by builders or by wreckers, are THE TRIBUNE Building, the National Life Building, and the Marshall Field Building.

Some of the Lesser Structures.

Then come the lesser structures, scattered all over the city. Among these buildings, on many of which work already has been begun, are:

The Columbian Malting company, addition to plant at One Hundred and Sixth street and Indianapolis avenue, to cost $100,000.

James Heckman, four-story apartment building at Washington avenue and Sixty-second street, to cost $90,000.

Western Cold Storage company, eight-story addition to plant at 30 North State street, to cost $90,000.

C. A. Stonehill, residence in Drexel boulevard and Forty-eighth street, to cost $75,000.

James Bolton, four-story apartment building, South Park avenue and Fifty-fourth street, to cost $70,000.

Philip Angsten, three-story apartment building at 5402 and 5404 Prairie avenue, to cost $65,000.

L. Klein, residence at Grand boulevard and Forty-fourth street, to cost $60,000.

Sanford Manufacturing company, five-story factory building, Congress and Peoria streets, to cost $60,000.

Samuel Brown Jr., twelve two-story houses near the Wilson avenue station, to cost $54,000.

Francis W. Parker School, Webster avenue, near Lincoln Park, to cost $50,000.

William L. Beck, three-story apartment building, Indiana avenue and Fifty-seventh street, to cost $50,000.

Albert Madlener, State street and Burton place, three-story residence, to cost $45,000.

M. E. Greenebaum, three-story residence at 4508 Drexel boulevard, to cost $40,000.

W. T. Woodley, two three-story apartment buildings in Calumet avenue, between Forty-sixth and Forty-seventh streets, to cost $40,000.

Many other buildings are contemplated, but plans have not yet taken on definite form. All in all, Chicago is building—building with a will.

DEATH OF JAMES H. PEARSON.

Pioneer Lumber Dealer Expires at His Jackson Boulevard Residence in His 81st Year.

James H. Pearsons, for more than fifty years a resident of Chicago, died last evening in his residence, 509 Jackson boulevard, aged 80 years. He was one of the pioneer lumbermen of the State and for years was an extensive operator in the pineries of Michigan and Wisconsin. His first yards, established half a century ago, were at Madison and Market streets.

Mr. Pearsons was identified with various financial institutions and was one of the founders of the Union Trust company, of which concern he was a director since its establishment. He was an active member of the First Congregational Church and had taken a deep interest in the affairs of the Chicago Theological Seminary.

Mr. Pearsons was born in Haverhill, N. H., on Dec. 10, 1820, and came to Chicago in 1851. He is survived by a widow and three sons and a daughter by his first wife. The children are Arthur, Eugene, and Robert, and Mrs. H. M. Scott. The funeral will be from the residence on Wednesday afternoon.

ROGERS PARK WANTS A COURT.

Difference of Opinion as to the Question of Sholes as Justice—He Expects Reinstatement.

A difference of opinion exists in Rogers Park regarding the discontinuing of the police court there. Justice R. M. Sholes, the deposed magistrate, believes that he will receive his appointment from Mayor Harrison within a few days and will be able to resume hearings. The Rogers Park Improvement association will take no hand in the affair unless it is found that Justice Sholes was removed without cause.

The Justice has written a letter to Controller McGann stating his position and giving a history of his service as police magistrate. He has been justice of the peace at Rogers Park since 1888, when he received his commission from Governor Richard J. Oglesby, and has performed the duties of the office since Rogers Park was annexed to Chicago as a holdover magistrate. He says he has never received any pay for the 1,041 cases he has tried.

FORECASTS RAILWAY RATE WAR

Resignation of Felton from Kansas City Rate Committee Taken to Mean Trouble.

A rate war on the railroads entering Kansas City from Eastern points is forecasted by the resignation of S. M. Felton Jr., President of the Chicago and Alton, from the chairmanship of the Kansas City Rate committee. The committee, say railroad men, has been disorganized since the withdrawal of both the Rock Island and Burlington roads some time ago, and was virtually out of active existence. Mr. Felton has been active in trying to bring about peace among the warring railway interests, but had been unsuccessful. The difficulty arises from the fact that the Wabash, which has a shorter line to the East than the other parallel roads, insists on continuing a differential rate of $2.

George Edward Waddell pitched yesterday "for the benefit of the bankers, brokers, and business-men who did not get to see him pitch Friday," and, by one of the most remarkable exhibitions of curve delineation ever seen, he injected the third straight defeat into the braves from St. Louis. By his great pitching, his Dan Ricesque style of fielding, and with able support, from Childs and McCormick especially, Waddell kept the Cardinals in a state of frothing helplessness until the eighth inning, when he allowed them three runs.

Meantime Chicago had attacked Murphy with great vehemence early in the game and piled up enough tallies to insure victory, so the big crowd was happy and yelled delightedly all afternoon, forgiving mistakes and applauding good plays, roaring at every move Waddell made. There was nothing to mar the enjoyment of the 8,000 persons. The game was full of action and color. Wonderful stops and catches, dazzling combination plays, desperate base running, and a victory for the home club made the spectators forget the chilling gale that swept the field and when the victory was clinched the crowd stood up and roared a hearty farewell to Loftus' remnants as they started on their long eastern raid. The victory lifted Loftus' men out of last place, above St. Louis and close behind the other stragglers in the race.

Although the struggle lasted but an hour and twenty-two minutes, there were enough individual feats in it to fill a volume. Childs started two kaleidoscopic double plays which wrecked chances the Cardinals had to make runs. It was Childs, too, who, when St. Louis had made a single and a scratch in the sixth inning, giving them their first real chance to score, raced far out back of second and dragged down Donovan's teasing little fly, which threatened to fall safe.

Waddel as a Hat Rack.

Besides, Waddell twice jumped high into the air, stretched himself out like a hall hat rack, and pulled down high bounders which might have turned into base hits, and McCormick, and Raymer, and Dexter shared largely in the applause. For St. Louis Padden performed a miracle which kept down Chicago's majority, for, with the bases full, he went almost back of McGann, stuck out one hand, and scooped in Childs' bounder, which seemed a sure hit.

There were mistakes, but these were overlooked, as they cost nothing and came sandwiched between brilliant plays, so everybody was forgiven, especially Raymer, who atoned for many errors and mishaps, past and to come, by his two slashing drives, each one of which sent home two tallies.

St. Louis started well, Burkett opening the game with a hit, but, an instant later, a flashlight double play, started by Childs and worked by McCormick, wrecked the Cardinal's chances. Then Loftus' men went out after the victory. Murphy gave Hartsel a base, Dolan singled, and Green popped up a fly trying to sacrifice. Burkett, usually so sure, muffed Dexter's line fly, filling the bases. Padden, who played Jack-in-the-box with Comiskey, then made a phenomenal play and robbed Childs of a base hit, which was grand larceny, for no one needs hits more than does the infant. But, while Padden put Childs out, Hartsel scored and, an instant later, Raymer sent home two more tallies with a slashing hit to left.

Three More in Third.

There was nothing doing in the second. Then the Remnants fell upon Murphy and made another trio of tallies. Dexter and Childs drew bases, and sang the thieves' duet as they stole together. Raymer atoned for some more of his mistakes with a hit that sent home two more runs. Raymer went to second on the throw to the plate, and scored on Kling's slashing hit. Waddell set the big crowd yelping with delight by hitting safely, but, when he stole, Kling was caught at the plate.

Finally, in the eighth, the Cardinals broke the ice. Waddell gave Kruger a base. Perhaps that took the hoodoo off St. Louis. Anyhow, Nichols singled, sending Kruger to third, from where he scored on Murphy's fly. Burkett drove a liner to left, which hit the fence and bounded way over into center, letting him reach third, and he scored on Heidrick's bounder to Childs.

Waddell seemed to fear some mishap might befall in the ninth, so he trusted no one but himself. He did an acrobatic stunt, turned half over, and came near drilling a hole through Dexter, when he finally grabbed McGann's bounder and threw him out. Then he reached high over Dexter's head and picked off Wallace's foul, and, being assured of victory, he permitted Childs to end the game with a clever stop and throw on Padden's bounder.

Notes of the Game.

Delehanty will join Loftus at Cleveland this morning, and go East with the team.

The high wind gave the fielders on both sides lots of trouble. In the sixth Waddell poked up a tall fly back of third. Wallace ran around in circles, but finally jumped backwards, stuck out one hand, and caught the ball.

Dolan blundered in the seventh, and threw away a run. He hit up a tall fly, and, throwing away his bat in disgust, refused to run. The wind carried the ball all around, and it fell five feet from McGann, who picked it up and trotted to first, getting a put out. Green's double, which followed, was wasted.

McCormick staved off danger in the second. McGann reached first on Raymer's fumble, and Raymer, seeming to be unsettled by his error, grabbed Wallace's bounder and threw to second too late to catch McGann, who was stealing. McCormick made a flash throw to first, and put out Wallace there.

Dexter gave the Cardinals an opening in the seventh. He caught McCormick's perfect throw long before McGann reached first, but pulled his foot off the bag, evidently fearing McGann would step on him, so Emslie called McGann safe, and gave McCormick and Childs another chance to work one of their rapid doubles.

Chicago lost a chance to score in the fifth. Childs reached first on Padden's fumble, second on a passed ball, and third on an out. McCormick hit to Wallace, who shut Childs off at the plate. There was a lively chase. Wallace finally tagged Childs out, and by a rapid throw caught McCormick ten feet off second, standing still.

Detroit, Mich., May 12.—[Special.]—The White Stockings made a strong rally today in the last three innings of the game at Burns Park, but were unable to send enough men around the bases to win out, the final score being 7 to 5.

Sievers was touched up for five hard hits in those innings, two of them being home run drives over left field fence. These safe ones and Dillon's error netted the visitors five runs, which was the Tigers' total when the rally started. In the seventh, however, doubles by Holmes and Dillon scored the former, and in the eighth Casey made the circuit, so that the White Sox were just those two runs behind when it was all over.

The visitors could get but nine hits off Sievers, and were aided by only one misplay. Katoll, on the other hand, was touched up for fifteen hits, and the visitors contributed four errors, for two of which Jack Katoll was responsible.

In spite of a cold, raw wind, 7,000 people turned out, and they were rewarded by some of the prettiest playing that has been seen here this season, on the rough diamond of the Sunday grounds. Three of the mistakes made by the visitors were wild throws, and the fielding for the most part was fast and clean.

Hartman a Star Performer.

"Dutch" Hartman was the stellar attraction. He not only led with the stick to the creditable tune of a double and home run, but he performed well in the field, barring a stunt, which was not on the program in the fourth. In the seventh he raced over to the bleachers and pulled down Buelow's foul fly, and took Sullivan's throw nicely in the sixth, catching Sievers off third when the bases were full and no one was out. After that Gleason hit to Mertes for an easy double play and Katoll was out of one of the numerous holes into which he got during the game.

That was by no means the only time when good fielding stopped the Tigers. In the third, with one out, Holmes hit for a single and Dillon for two sacks, "Ducky" going to third. Elberfeld then dropped a little one in front of the plate and was out at first. Holmes tried to score, but was nipped by Isbell's accurate throw. Katoll started things in the second when he threw wild on Dillon after Holmes had gone out. The first baseman went to second on the error. Elberfeld struck out, and Nance made a scorching double to center, scoring Dillon. Buelow singled, Shugart let Sievers' bounder get between his legs, and Casey drove another hard two-baser to left, sending Nance and Buelow home.

In the fifth Gleason sent a long drive down the right foul line and made third easily, but was put back at second because of the ground rule. Holmes sacrificed, Dillon hit to right, and Gleason came home. Elberfeld then popped a high fly to right and the wind carried it so far that Jones lost it. Dillon, however, had staid at first and was an easy out at second. Elberfeld stole and came home on Nance's hit. Dillon and Holmes doubled in the eighth, one run resulting, and Casey and Barret hit safely in the eighth. Barret led off first, and while the White Sox infield was trying to retire him Casey galloped home.

White Sox Begin Late.

For the visitors no runs were negotiated until the seventh, when Mertes led off with a double. Isbell went out at first and Hartman walked. Buelow threw to catch Hartman, who was off first, and Mertes raced for home. The throw was wild and both runners scored. Katoll lifted the ball over the fence in the eighth, and Hartman did the same in the ninth after Isbell singled. Score:

Notes of the Game.

Miller will probably pitch tomorrow's game for Detroit, while Patterson or Griffith will do the twirling for the visitors.

There was considerable kicking on both sides, but the umpires were firm, and neither side went so far as to delay the game to any extent.

In the first inning Hoy drove a hard one to right, and started for second, thinking it an easy double. Holmes took the ball on the bound, and cut the mute off by ten feet.

In the sixth Sullivan led off with a fine double. Gleason retired Katoll at first, and Sievers struck Hoy out. Jones drove a hard grounder at short, and was nipped about two feet by Elberfeld's sharp throw.

Hartman's error in the fourth was a peculiar one. He knocked Siever's bounder down, and started to throw to first, but changed his mind. The ball slipped from his fingers and rolled over towards Mertes.

Sievers made a fine one-hand stop of Isbell's sharp grounder in the seventh, and would have prevented Mertes, who had doubled, from reaching third, but his position was such that he could not throw anywhere but to Dillon.

Jones failed to get a hit, but he smashed the ball hard every time up. Three times he gave Elberfeld hard chances, one a grounder and the others line drives that could not have been handled if they had not been right at the fielder. Gleason nearly robbed Isbell of his single in the ninth. He reached the ball over second bag, and threw sharply to first. Many thought Isbell out, but Manassau called him safe, and he scored on Hartman's homer.

Milwaukee, 5; Cleveland, 3.

Milwaukee, Wis., May 12.—Dowling kept the hits well scattered this afternoon, and would have shut Cleveland out but for errors by Duffy, Anderson, and Gilbert. The game was fast and snappy, despite the cold weather. The batting of Burke and the fielding of Conroy were features. Score:

DEFENDER'S DECKS CLEAR

TWO-THIRDS OF CONSTITUTION'S RIGGING ALREADY IN PLACE.

Herreshoff Yacht Presents a Jaunty Appearance—Delay in Finishing the New Steel-Sheathed Gaff—Work Being Rushed at Top Speed—Details of the Boat's Outfit Aloft—First Trials Will Probably Take Place in the Lower Bay.

Bristol, R. I., May 12.—[Special.]—Constitution now lies at the Herreshoff shop practically two-thirds rigged, with clear decks and in spick and span condition generally speaking. If it were not for the new steel-sheathed gaff which is being rushed along at top speed it would take but a few days to sling the boom and gaff, bend the mainsail, and assemble the smaller sails and spars on board.

The greater part of the rigging now set up gives the craft a jaunty appearance. It is neat and trim in every particular, the splices and wire serving being one of the best jobs of the kind turned out at Herreshoff's.

The main shrouds were tautened up in the turnbuckles yesterday, the mainmast now being completely supported with its permanent rigging without rope guys. Noticeable in the adjustment of the shrouds is the point of stationing the forward shroud on each side to the lowest of the lug straps two-thirds of the distance up from the deck. The center shroud engages at its upper end the center lug, while the after shroud engages the upper lug in the row on the mast. The uppermost fixed shroud in its lead has a slight turn against the inboard end of the outrigger, but aside from that the shrouds lead clear of each other to the deck. Another noticeable feature is that each shroud turnbuckle engages every alternate chain plate, thus giving sufficient spread to the lower ends of the shrouds to cover a good-sized base.

There are six chain plates at starboard and the same number on the port side of the craft. They are at equal distance apart, something like seven inches on centers. The turnbuckles are galvanized, and outside the screws, to protect the threads, are curved guards of steel. Inside the turnbuckle shackles and showing just above the deck or waterways on each side abreast the chain plates are small metal pin rails, giving strength also to that part of the deck. The upper shackles of the turnbuckles connect with the galvanized crinkles around which the lower ends of the shrouds are turned for the splice.

A look aloft on the new Bristol cup defender cannot fail to be interesting to the yachtsmen. The jumper stay leading down from the fore side of the masthead is of steel wire, like the shrouds, but not quite as large. Passing over the tip end of the V-shaped masthead strut three feet out from the surface of the spar, it passes down through a score in the lower mast-band and about six inches further down engages its turnbuckle, which was being adjusted and set up yesterday afternoon.

The spreaders of white shaded wood are fitted into brass sockets at the ends and are not rigid, as are those on board the Columbia, which had fixed sockets of steel, and part of the mast through the ends of which the wooden outriggers are shipped.

It is learned that the craft will be first tried out in the lower bay before it goes outside. It is likely that the sails will be bent when the boat is away from the wharf to prevent the canvas being soiled. Then the Mound Morris will tow the cup defender out into deep water, where it will swing clear and proceed under sail.

RESULT OF LONG EXPERIMENT.

Shamrock II. Combines Best Points of Eleven Different Models Tested by Watson—London Field's Views.

New York, May 12.—[Special.]—The Field says George L. Watson, the designer of Shamrock II., was experimenting for nine months in the tank at Denny's yard in 1900. Eleven different models were used and there were sixty modifications. The experiments convinced Mr. Watson which was the best model to use for the challenger, and then he developed Shamrock II. from what those models showed him.

Shamrock II. is an extreme specimen of the fin keel type, and possesses abnormally long overhangs. As compared with recent challengers it appears much larger in the bow and much finer where the quarters run back into the counter. This counter is of great length and tapers to a markedly narrow taffrail. The lines are easy and graceful, the bilges beautifully rounded, and the body of the boat leaves no impression of fullness at any point. The keel is in the form of a trough strongly plated, the lead being run in in a molten state.

May Launch Independence Thursday.

Boston, Mass., May 12.—[Special.]—This afternoon before 2 o'clock there was a crowd at the gate of the Atlantic works, from which one might have judged that Independence was about to be launched. The crowd was due to the announcement made Saturday that the shed in which the yacht was being built would not be open to the public after this afternoon. Camera fiends sought every point of vantage within the shed from which to get good views. Captain Haff was the principal object of interest. He took the whole performance good-naturedly. Nothing could be gained from those in charge in regard to the time of launching, but the manner in which the work is being pushed on the ways indicates that Independence will go overboard within a few days, possibly Thursday. The under body has been well polished, and there is little to be done in preparation. It is now believed the boat will be launched by daylight, in spite of the assertions to the contrary.

Shamrocks Towed to Portland.

[Special Cable to The Chicago Tribune.]

WEYMOUTH, May 12.—The steam yacht Erin towed the two Shamrocks this afternoon from Southampton inside the Portland breakwater. The two yachts will race to sea and back again for several days. The new mainsail for Shamrock II. will not be bent until the new gaff is received from Dumbarton. Sir Thomas Lipton has received a photograph from the President of the United States signed "Cordially yours, William McKinley."

CHICAGO MAN IS PRESIDENT.

Annual Meeting of North American Skat League—Next Congress to Be Held in Detroit.

Julius Schiller of 3334 Rhodes avenue was elected President of the North American Skat league at the annual election held at the First Regiment Armory yesterday. The election of Mr. Schiller was unanimous, not a dissenting voice being heard. The election resulted as follows:

President—Julius Schiller, Chicago.
First Vice President—Josef Guentner, Detroit.
Second Vice President—J. Charles Elthhorn, Detroit.
Treasurer—Charles P. Hagerdorn, Chicago.
Secretary—A. R. Brandt, Chicago.
Directors—Robert Schiller, Milwaukee; Richard Werner, Cincinnati; Leopold Schmals, St. Louis; Dr. Emil Martin, Indianapolis.

A banquet was held before the election. Emil Hoechster officiated as toastmaster, and, in an informal speech, spoke for the success of the present skat congress and for future congresses. Other speeches were made by Otto Frank, Dr. Emil Martin of Indianapolis, and H. Werbke of Milwaukee.

It was decided to hold the next skat congress in 1902, at Detroit. This will be the first congress Detroit has had, and the members who are attending the present one are jubilant over the prospects, and say they will make it an event long to be remembered. It is expected that the congress of 1903 will be held either at Indianapolis or St. Louis. A few players from New York and Philadelphia are in attendance, and made an effort to have the congress held in the East, but the committee considered the distance too great to travel for a three-day meet, and the plans, as far as these two cities are concerned, were for the present abandoned. The first congress was held at St. Louis, four years ago, the second at Indianapolis, and the third at Milwaukee.

After the election the committee adjourned until this afternoon, when action will be taken on the rules and regulations of the congress. There are about 700 players in attendance at the congress, and Chicago has more players than any of the cities represented. Milwaukee has the largest out-of-town delegation, about 150 players. St. Louis follows with 70, Detroit and Indianapolis with 50 each, and Madison with 25. Several smaller cities in States close by send delegations of from two to ten players.

The prizes offered are the handsomest that have yet been given at a skat congress, and are valued at over $2,000. The first prize is a silver liquor case valued at $250. There is a large cut glass punch bowl and several other valuable pieces of glassware.

Play was started in the closing night's tournament at 8 o'clock last night, and 700 players participated. Every one was finished shortly after 11 o'clock. The scores in a skat congress are never given out until the finish of the tourney. Three men only can play the game, but there are four men at each table, one of whom keeps score and deals the cards. Eighty games in all are played by four men. The third day and night are consumed in counting the scores for the two nights and the distribution of the prizes.

Several of the out-of-town delegations are considering a trip down the drainage channel to Lockport this afternoon, and if a boat can be secured the trip will in all probability be made.

FIGHT FOLLOWERS ANXIOUS.

Await the Result of Council's Vote Tonight on Ordinance Permitting Renewal of Boxing in Chicago.

[BY GEORGE SILER.]

The principal topic on tap in sporting resorts from Twenty-second street down to Randolph street yesterday was "Will the boxing game open, and if it does who will have control of the big shows?" It is five months since local fistic followers had an opportunity to witness a boxing contest and they are aching all over to see the glove wielders exchange swings, jabs, and uppercuts again. The enforced rest has been a severe blow to the boxers and compelled quite a number of them to put in a full day's work of ten hours to make ends meet. Those who could not secure work and those who would not accept work if it was offered to them took to barnstorming. Purses which they scornfully turned down when the game was ripe were sought after with an energy worthy of a street faker. Before Alderman Patterson delivered his famous solar plexus blow the second and third rate "prelim" scrapper basked in the sunshine of prosperity, or presumed prosperity, and had to be prodded out of his siesta to accept a purse for a larger amount than he could earn in two months at manual labor. After Patterson's knock-out punch any amount prefaced with a dollar mark was acceptable. They have had a taste of the bitter and the sweet of pugilism and it is hoped they have profited thereby.

Tonight Alderman Fick will present his resolution repealing the Patterson ordinance to the members of the Council and the result of the action of the board will be awaited with more interest than the result of a heavyweight championship contest. It is needless to say the sports are rooting for Fick to win.

Frank Childs and "Denver Ed" Martin, the colored heavyweights, are having a difficult time of it trying to solve the fistic problem as to which is the better man. Matched over three months ago to fight in Cincinnati and with offers, good and bad, to fight in a half-dozen other places, they clinched matters to settle the question of superiority in Grand Rapids tomorrow night. Martin had been on the ground for several weeks and Childs left for the scene of the battle Saturday night. Everything appeared lovely. The advance sale of seats was large and a $5,000 house was staring the fighters and their managers in the face. But just as every one connected with the affair began figuring on the success of the venture Governor Bliss pressed the button and the Sheriff did the rest. Billy Madden and the managers of the Olympic club, under whose auspices the contest was to have been held, made every effort to square matters, but without success, so the contest was declared off as far as Grand Rapids was concerned. Next.

FIGHTERS QUIT GRAND RAPIDS.

Madden Says Childs and Martin May Meet in Chicago if an Ordinance Is Passed Tonight.

Grand Rapids, Mich., May 12.—[Special.]—Governor Bliss has scored a knockout in the first round. His message to Sheriff Chapman to take no chances and to prevent the Martin-Childs fight scheduled for Tuesday night at any hazard has put the promoters to sleep. Today it was announced the fight was off. Manager Madden, with Martin and Ruhlin, left this evening for the East after pulling down their share of the $150 forfeit money deposited by the Olympic club as a guarantee to pull off the fight. Childs arrived from Chicago this morning, to find everything in the air, and he will retrace his steps at once. A large number of seats have been sold, and the purchasers will receive their money back. The club went to a considerable expense in preparing for the fight, and had the ring completed at the Auditorium. There is a crowd of sore sports in town today. Madden said before he left that if the Chicago Council decided to permit limited glove contests arrangements would be made to pull off the fight in Chicago.

Jeffries in New York.

New York, May 12.—[Special.]—Jim Jeffries returned to town today after an absence of six months. He finished his theatrical season in Pittsburg on Saturday night. He says he has done well in a financial way, but "actin' is not fightin'." In two weeks he will go to California, where he expects to take on Ruhlin, then Sharkey, and, later, Fitzsimmons. He will train for Ruhlin at Los Angeles. He won $7,000 on stocks.

Several local fans will accompany the party, and a few more will leave for Toledo early tomorrow morning.

PRAISE OF THE PARADER.

EASTERN HORSEMEN CONSIDER HIM A GREAT 3-YEAR-OLD.

Believe He Is One of the Finest Colts of His Age Ever Turned Out — Supremacy Between Him and Domino May Be Tested in the Belmont Stakes on May 23—Special Events for This Week—Gossip of Racing at Worth—Poor Field in Latonia Derby.

New York, May 12.—[Special.]—The victory of R. T. Wilson Jr.'s crack colt The Parader in the classic Withers Stakes at Morris Park yesterday was of such a nature that all turfmen were discussing it today. Among them it was the consensus of opinion that when The Parader and James R. Keene's superb 3-year-old Commando come together there will be a horse race productive of sensational results. Unless all signs fail, The Parader and Commando will measure strides in the rich Belmont Stakes to be run at Morris Park on May 23. In yesterday's race The Parader's time, 1:42¼, was phenomenal, considering the heavy going and the fact that the handsome son of Longstreet was not extended.

It is not stretching things to say turfmen generally look upon The Parader as one of the finest 3-year-olds ever turned out. The colt is a big, powerful-looking animal, though he is cleanly cut and is the typical thoroughbred. He comes from a noted family of blue-blooded racers, and apparently is conscious of the fact that his present mission on the turf is to uphold the reputation of his ancestors.

It would appear as if August Belmont's sprinter Amicitia, winner of the Fashion Stakes, bids fair to stand in the front rank of the 2-year-olds. The most remarkable thing about the victory on Saturday was her frequent attempts to run away, which under ordinary circumstances would serve to take all the speed and staying quality out of many youngsters. After using up much time and strength in this manner Amicitia was still able to win by a head, even though it was necessary for her jockey to ride clear around three of the leaders when half-way down the stretch in order to get through.

Tomorrow the features at Morris Park will be the Baychester Stakes for beaten 3-year-olds, at one mile, and the New Rochelle Handicap for 3-year-olds and upwards at seven furlongs. Banastar may not go to the post. It is said he was severely kicked by a stable mate, Gulden, on Friday and that Trainer Hill has decided to let the noted horse rest. Contestor, too, is supposed to be unable to start because of a breakdown. On Wednesday the Laureate Stakes for 2-year-olds ought to bring out a lot of illustrious youngsters. On Thursday the Neff stakes for 3-year-olds and upward and the second serial spring handicap, the Claremont, will be decided. These events will gradually lead up to the fourth National Stallion race on Saturday. This will be worth close to $20,000 in the aggregate.

H. D. McIntyre, secretary of the new Saratoga Racing association, has made public the list of horses that were nominated to run in the Saratoga Special. The race, which is for 2-year-olds, is the most important of the meeting, and will be worth close to $25,000. Sixty-eight entries have been named.

JOHN TUCKER DIES SUDDENLY.

Manager of C. K. G. Billings' Stable of Trotters and Pacers Expires of Apoplexy.

John Tucker, who for the last few years has had charge of C. K. G. Billings' stable of trotters and pacers, died suddenly last night of apoplexy at his residence, 316 Washington boulevard. Mr. Tucker was for a long time a prominent figure in horse circles and was known to all the leading owners and drivers of the country. He was a good judge of horses, and to his careful preparation the phenomenal success of Mr. Billings' horses was largely due.

FAST TRIO TO MEET AGAIN.

Boney Boy, Caviar, and Louisville Entered for the Mile Event at New Worth Track Today.

Boney Boy, Caviar, and Louisville, the horses that finished first, second, and third, respectively, in the Wabash Handicap at Worth on Saturday, will meet in a mile race today. Boney Boy will carry two pounds more than he did in the Wabash, and Louisville one pound less.

Saturday's events at the new track brought out the best horses in the stables, but the finishes in the first, second, and fifth events were not such as to cause enthusiasm. The defeat of Miss Bennett was not anticipated. She was either short or the pace set by Minyon, the despised outsider, took all the run out of her and therefore made her easy for The Rush. Abe Frank showed his worth by giving South Elkhorn a disgraceful beating.

Robert Waddell, Bradley's Derby hope, won his race easily, but he had really nothing to beat. There is no question of Waddell's being able to go some, and his followers for the big classic are numerous. Future book speculators, however, will keep their eyes on the doings of The Parader, who walked away with the Withers Stake at Morris Park from a high-class field on Saturday.

College baseball was a decidedly inferior quality last week. There was scarcely a game in which errors were not numerous, and every defeated nine had a hard luck story of misplays or pitching slumps at critical moments, with the inevitable reversal of what "might have been." In Saturday's games Chicago and Illinois were beaten by Wisconsin and Michigan respectively, in ninth inning rallies. The Minnesota-Chicago game was a giveaway contest, in which the maroons proved the most expert givers.

Wisconsin heads the percentage list, but has played fewer games than the other colleges in its class. Chicago's bad slump of the previous week was repeated with accumulations. Stagg is in a quandary about his pitchers. First Calhoun proved his unfitness to preside in the box, and later Smith made an easy thing of it for both Illinois and Wisconsin. Smith's weakness is all the more surprising, because hitherto he has been considered one of the strongest twirlers the varsity ever had. Howe did fair work in the Minnesota game, but he has neither the curves nor the speed to make a formidable pitcher.

Illinois is an enigma. Huff's team is known to contain the best pitchers and some of the most skillful fielders in the West, and on form ought to beat anything in sight. It is only at rare intervals, however, that the men demonstrate their ability. After trouncing Chicago roundly on Wednesday the team was taken in tow by Michigan on Saturday, and that after the Illini had the game practically stowed away in their pockets. It is another illustration of tradition. Illinois always beats Chicago at baseball, and Michigan always beats Illinois. The strength of the teams seems not to cut much figure in the matter.

Notre Dame was defeated by Illinois and Beloit after a clean record of victories. Northwestern fell before Beloit, being handicapped by the illness of Pitcher Johnson.

Chicago and Michigan will play their second game on Wednesday, and the last two days of the week the maroons will play Illinois and Purdue on their home grounds. Michigan will start on its Eastern trip Friday, playing two games with Cornell. Northwestern and Illinois will meet Saturday.

AMERICAN COAL GAINS IN FAVOR.

French Government Proposes to Give Fuel from United States a Fair Trial.

BRITISH GROW UNEASY.

Waldeck-Rousseau Returns to Paris and Hopes to Pass Associations Law.

SARAH BERNHARDT ANGRY.

[Special Cable to The Chicago Tribune by Grace Corneau.]

PARIS, May 12.—The French government, it is said, regards the proposition of Mr. MacIwane, representing an important American coal interest, with great favor. Mr. MacIwane came to Paris to obtain from the government a fair trial for American coal. Minister Delcasse, who, it is said, ardently desires the Franco-American treaty to pass, is strongly urging the government to favor the American coal markets. MacIwane has secured important promises of orders.

The English coal agents who are here are greatly alarmed over the success of MacIwane's mission and fear the Americans will capture the continental coal market.

Fears American Sea Power.

The newspaper, Français, raises the alarm over the increase in the American naval fleet and that nation's activity in marine construction and says the United States is certainly working to become the first naval power in the world.

Asks Millerand to Resign.

The Congress of Socialists in the Seine department today held a stormy discussion over the position of Minister Millerand in regard to a party resolution passed, in substance as follows:

"The presence of Millerand in the ministry no longer being needed, the Congress invites Millerand to resign."

The moderate Republicans no longer want Millerand in the Cabinet, and Raymond Poincaré, in a sensational political speech at Nancy today, declared the presence of Millerand to be dangerous.

Want Long Army Service.

The Ministers of War and Marine visited Lyons today, where General Andre made a notable speech declaring that the military service in the army must not be reduced. The reduction of time of service from three to two years is one of the cherished desires of the Socialist and Radical supporters of the government, and the new change of tone is felt to be due to Delcasse's visit to Russia, when he was promised that the Czar's designs against the French army would cease.

Socialists Riot at Lyons.

Senator Piou sent out invitations last night to a lecture at Saint Etienne upon the bill against religious associations. The Socialists broke into the hall, smashed the furniture, and routed the Senator and his guests. They rioted about until nearly 3 o'clock in the morning. The press universally protests against such lawlessness. Premier Waldeck-Rousseau returned to Paris tonight in good health and Parliament opens on Tuesday. The Premier expects the law against associations to pass the Senate by the middle of July.

Sarah Bernhardt Angry.

Sarah Bernhardt is angry at Edmund Rostand for making visits to solicit votes in support of his candidacy to the French Academy, and declares such action beneath the dignity of the first poet of France. Mme. Sarah is said to be so incensed that she threatens not to give Rostand his share of the hide of an alligator she is said to have killed in America, and which she proposes to divide among her particular friends.

Charles Crane of Chicago has arrived in Paris and will take his family to the Norman coast for the summer and then go to St. Petersburg on business.

Part of Evans Estate Sold.

Several of the residences forming part of the estate of the late Dr. Thomas W. Evans, the American dentist, were put up at auction today. The Hotel des Souverains, as it became known during the Paris exposition, was offered at the upset price of 2,800,000 francs, but did not find a purchaser.

The property on the Rue de La Pompe was offered at the upset price of 900,000 francs, but this also was not sold.

The house on the Avenue Kleber was sold for 420,000 francs.

She is willing to renounce the prolongation of copyright on the other operas of Wagner if her request as to "Parsifal" is granted. LONDON, May 13.—General De Wet, according to a dispatch to the Daily Mail from Pretoria, has resumed operations and is reported to have crossed into the Transvaal with 2,000 men.

At a banquet of the Cornish association held here General Pole-Carew said:

"At the beginning of the war, had the Boers fully realized their strength and our unpreparedness, we would have been driven into Durban and Cape Town, and we would have presented the spectacle of reconquering south Africa from the seacoast."

WOMAN WHO LOST IN STOCKS WANTS UNCLE SAM TO PAY.

Refuses to Be "Wiped Out" and Calls at Subtreasury on Sunday and Demands Return of $500.

New York, May 12.—[Special.]—Wall street was nearly deserted at 11 o'clock this morning, when a stylishly dressed woman of uncertain age turned into it from Broadway. She was talking rapidly to herself and punctuating her remarks with emphatic gestures, the diamond rings on her fingers flashing as she waved her arms. She seemed like a left over unit of the hustling, bustling, excited crowd that surged through the street in business hours last week.

She walked up the steps of the Subtreasury Building and knocked on the heavy door.

The watchman opened the slide and demanded whose there?

"I want to come in," she said.

"Can't do it, today, madam, not open for business."

"But I must come it. I want to see the Treasurer."

"What Treasurer?"

"Why, your Treasurer; you've got a Treasurer, haven't you? This wouldn't be a Treasury Building without a Treasurer, would it?"

Not being hired to answer conundrums, the watchman was silent, and the woman went on: "I want to see the Treasurer to get my money, my money, you know," and she began to talk in a louder tone. "It is my money, though my broker says I lost it because I was wiped out. But I'm not wiped out, and I'm here to get that $500, and your Treasurer has got it. Give it to me. I won't be wiped out; so, there. Now, open the door. You can't? You mean you won't.

"I see you're all alike down here. You're all thieves and robbers; that's what you are. I thought there was some honesty in this government, but there is not one bit, and if President McKinley wasn't way out in California I'd just go right down to Washington and see him and tell him how I've been treated."

"But, madam, we don't do business here on Sunday, and I can't do anything for you. You'd better go away."

The watchman closed the peep hole, and as the woman turned to go down the steps she shouted:

"I'm going right down to the customhouse to give them a piece of my mind down there, and then I'll go some place else, and I'll keep going until I get $500 worth of satisfaction if it takes me a week."

Ignoring of Union Pacific in Burlington Deal Starts Battle of Financiers.

FOES THEN BUY "NIPPER."

New York, May 12.—[Special.]—The following statement concerning the clash between the Union Pacific and the Northern Pacific interests has been secured from a source that is thoroughly reliable. The person making the statement is so well known for accuracy that no doubt can be entertained of its absolute correctness:

Early in the present year large stockholders in the Northern Pacific and Great Northern railroads began to accumulate Burlington and Quincy shares at an alarming rate—alarming for the Union Pacific interests. The buying continued until Burlington and Quincy went to 170, although it had been quoted at 140 only a few weeks before.

Mr. Hill was interrogated by the Union Pacific people as to the meaning of his large purchases of Burlington and Quincy. He denied all knowledge or interest in the movement. It was soon found, however, that their credulity had been imposed upon. Mr. Hill had been carrying on and had brought well-nigh to a conclusion negotiations for the purchase of the road.

Hill Urged to Drop Deal.

With positive evidence in their possession, representatives of the Union Pacific sought another conference with Mr. Hill. This conference was held at the residence of George F. Baker. In the course of this conference Mr. Hill was urged not to carry into effect, on behalf of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific interests, his contemplated deal without first coming to an agreement by which the Union Pacific would be protected and assured against aggressions in its territory.

It was impossible to elicit anything from Mr. Hill except vague statements, and he proceeded to Boston to complete the purchase. Under the terms of this purchase the Burlington and Quincy was to be turned over to the Great Northern and Northern Pacific interests at the rate of $200 a share. It is not likely that the Burlington stock previously acquired, said to amount to 400,000 shares, had cost more, on an average, than $160 a share. Here is an apparent profit of $16,000,000 or more.

The Union Pacific people then appealed to J. P. Morgan, who was leaving for Europe, but it was too late. His partners were then approached in a spirit of friendly protest, and upon their suggestion that no proposition had been submitted by the Union Pacific interests, the latter made the positive offer to join in the Burlington purchase, undesirable as they believed it to be at the high figure agreed upon. Their proposition was to buy one-third of the stock, and they offered to deposit cash or give satisfactory security for any bonds the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific might have to issue.

Morgan Rejects Propositions.

This also was refused by Mr. Morgan's partners, to whom it was then stated that the Union Pacific company must and would be protected at all hazards, for the situation the acquisition of the Burlington would produce could not be tolerated.

An effort to gain control of the Northern Pacific was then determined upon, and so swiftly and silently was this accomplished that upward of 40 per cent of the entire capital stock of the Northern Pacific was actually secured without the other side knowing it.

On Friday, May 3, Mr. Hill was informed in a friendly manner that $65,000,000 of Northern Pacific stock had passed into the hands of the Union Pacific interests, and with this assurance was given to Mr. Hill that the acquisition was made solely through a desire to bring about a harmonious condition of affairs. It was further stated that if he and his associates would be willing to accept the situation the control of the Northern Pacific would be permanently secured to J. P. Morgan & Co. upon the sole condition that the Union Pacific should be protected from aggression in its territory.

Fail to Reach an Understanding.

Mr. Hill promised to use every endeavor to bring about an understanding along these lines, but instead the furious and frantic buying of Northern Pacific stock began on Monday in both New York and London.

As so large a part of the share capital of the Northern Pacific had already passed into the hands of the Union Pacific interests, the new purchasers, within twenty-four hours after they had begun their frantic buying, necessarily brought about the unfortunate condition which is yet too vivid to need repetition.

Even after these conditions had been produced, every effort was made by the Union Pacific interests to protect both legitimate and speculative dealers against the terrible position in which these market interests had been placed. But these efforts were only tardily, unwillingly, and partially seconded by those without whose unreasonable action the situation could have been entirely avoided.

Harriman Interests in Control.

It was learned late tonight from a source that should be in a position to be well informed that the actual stockholding interests in the Northern Pacific of the Harriman people is sufficient to give them control of the property, this regardless of commitments for future delivery of stocks.

ONE WOMAN IN EASTMAN CASE ASKS FOR PROTECTION.

Mrs. Richard Grogan Jr., Wife of Man Killed by Harvard Professor, Says She Is Constantly Threatened.

Boston, Mass., May 12.—[Special.]—Mrs. Richard Grogan Jr., for the alleged murder of whose husband Professor Charles R. Eastman was tried and yesterday acquitted, drove to Cambridge police headquarters this afternoon and asked for police protection. She says she has received several threatening letters and that men are constantly loitering around her home.

Police were sent to her house to watch the premises.

Mrs. Grogan is completely unstrung by this development of the trial, which it was believed would end the troubles of all the Grogans and Eastmans.

The Eastmans held a reunion this afternoon at the Parker House. The party included Mr. and Mrs. A. V. Eastman of New Orleans, parents of Charles R. Eastman, Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Eastman, and young Mr. and Mrs. Eastman from the West.

The Harvard instructor would say nothing for publication, intimating that he might make a statement later on.

ABSORBS THE ATLAS LINE.

HAMBURG-AMERICAN ADDS TO ITS FLEET OF STEAMERS.

Latest Acquisition Consists of Seven Ships Plying Between New York and Jamaica, Hayti and Central America — Price Paid Said to Be $1,000,000 and Total of New Tonnage 18,000—Purchase Expected to Prove Valuable Feeder to European Trade

New York, May 12.—[Special.]—It was announced today by Emil Boas, General Manager in America of the Hamburg-American Steamship company, that the Atlas steamship line had been acquired by the Hamburg-American line. The acquisition of this property gives into German control the only English line of steamships plying between this port and the West Indies.

The purchase price is not stated, but it is understood to be in the neighborhood of $1,000,000, which is for the seven vessels of the line and the pier and other privileges.

The addition of the Atlas line increases by 18,000 the tonnage of the Hamburg-American line, and brings the total tonnage up to 630,000. The transfer of the property was made on Saturday, and was accomplished by Director General Albert Ballin of the line, who is at present in New York, having recently arrived from China.

The vessels of the Atlas line, which at present fly the British flag, but which now fly the colors of Germany, are the Adirondack, Alene, Alleghany, Alps, Altai, Andes, and Athos. The Altai is the newest of the vessels and is the flagship of the line. By the marine laws of Germany all Captains, chief engineers, and chief officers must be citizens of that country, so the present commanders and other high officers of the fleet, who are the Englishmen, will be compelled to relinquish their present positions.

As General Manager Boas expressed it, "The acquisition of the property will prove an important adjunct to the Hamburg-American line, and will result in the utilization of the vessels as feeders for the steamers running from New York to Europe."

The Hamburg-American line already operates eight services between Hamburg and West Indian and Central American ports.

The new acquisition gives to the Hamburg-American line a long desired outlet by way of this port. In the east Asia trade the line with the other great German packet, the North German Lloyd, has made substantial inroads on the monopoly of trade held for twenty years by the Great British company, the Peninsular and Oriental, and this latest deal is all the continuation of the ceaseless efforts that they have been putting forth the last twenty years to supplant the British in the marine trade.

COUNCIL SCORED BY A MEMBER.

Alderman Brenner Tells Jewish Peddlers That the Poor Stand Little Chance.

Three hundred peddlers who live in the ghetto district cheered yesterday when Alderman Brenner of the Ninth Ward declared that the City Council was the tool of the rich. Then they went ahead with plans to oppose the passage of a pending ordinance that if passed would put the street peddlers out of business.

Alderman Brenner was in a bitter mood, and his remarks reflected the spirit of the crowd.

"The present City Council," said the Alderman, "is for the sole benefit of the rich man and for the downfall of the poor."

The Alderman said that an ordinance was pending in the City Council which if passed prohibited the peddlers and small produce dealers from purchasing their goods from the railroad cars direct. This ordinance, he said, was backed by the commission men of South Water street, whose money and influence would insure its passage unless frustrated by prompt action.

Why the Cooking School Was Abolished. An anxious inquirer wishes to know why the domestic departments have been abolished in Armour Institute. The cooking school and sewing school in that institution were doing excellent work and Western cities far and near have been looking to Armour Institute for trained teachers in these branches. The late Mr. Armour was especially interested in giving young women as good a chance as young men in their lines of work. At first glance the abandonment of these departments appears to be unwise if not ungrateful. But Dean Alderson explains the matter in a way that ought to satisfy the public. He says this branch of the school was abolished for the same reason that the departments of music, art, shorthand, typewriting, and kindergarten work were dropped—because it has been found wisest to concentrate the work of the institution on the branches for which there was the greatest demand and which promised the greatest good. The engineering departments have crowded out the cooking and sewing schools, but a new cooking school is soon to be established in the central part of the city, where the Armour people believe it can do more good than it could when located so far south. Mrs. Armour has donated the equipment of the cooking department to the director of the new school, and the Armour trustees will continue to feel a friendly interest in the work of this separate enterprise. This explanation should be sufficient to justify the action of Armour Institute on the point in question. When the institute was founded its purpose was not definite and the school had to find its own field by experiment. In concentrating its energies upon a few of the higher technological branches it can accomplish the best results.

AMERICAN NAVAL CONSTRUCTION.

While the United States still remains some distance down the list in the numerical strength of its navy it stands at the top in the matter of speed, fighting strength, and skill in construction. The latest instance of this superiority is the torpedo boat Bailey, which made its trial trip on Long Island Sound a few days ago and reached a speed of thirty-three knots, or about thirty-eight miles an hour, its average for two hours being nearly thirty-five miles, which figure it was built to reach. The Porter and the Winslow, similar boats, both conspicuous in the Spanish-American war, have a speed of thirty-two and twenty-eight miles respectively.

American progress in the speed and strength of its naval vessels is already attracting attention abroad. One British naval expert is unable to understand why builders over there cannot produce equally strong and swift vessels in the same class as ours and frankly acknowledges that they have nothing in their navy of the same tonnage and horse-power which can compare with these torpedo boats. The same expert also asks why it is that American vessels can carry eight eight-inch guns more than the British and why the English six-inch batteries cannot be fully protected by armor and their new battleships have protected ends like ours. Even in the matter of boilers and propelling power American superiority is conceded.

The secret of this superiority is probably to be found in the greater skill of American shipwrights, which was demonstrated in the old days of clipper ships, which has been tested many times over in the contests of the racing machines, and which is now perceptible in the new cruisers and battleships. Shipbuilding is an American native industry and has been so for years. Along its vast stretches of seacoast there is hardly a boy fond of being on the water who cannot build his own canoe, knockabout, or yacht. But with all this superiority we are yet far from being a leading naval power.

GLASGOW TRAMS ELECTRIFIED.

Ten years ago the Glasgow Town Council began proceedings which resulted in the city's assumption of its tramway service on the 1st day of July, 1894. In displacing the operating company which had previously leased the tracks from the city, the Council put in an entirely new equipment, but horse traction was for the time being continued. The question of converting the system to electricity, however, was made the subject of immediate inquiry, and a year or two later commissions were sent both to the continent and to this country to study power traction.

The result was that an experimental line was equipped with the overhead trolley in 1898, and its operation was so successful that it was decided to convert all the lines to that system and to have the work completed in time for the present exhibition. That undertaking has been accomplished, and the entire mileage—which has been increased from 70 to 120 miles since the city came into possession—is now operated by the overhead system.

The power is generated in one central station and is distributed and transformed through five substations. Four hundred cars are now in use and the number is to be increased to 600. The cars are of the double deck style, and most of them are built, above the running gear, in the city's own car shops. The supply wires are suspended in part from side and in part from center poles, protecting wires being everywhere strung beneath the supply wires to prevent injury by their falling. The tracks and two of the four engines in the power-house are of American manufacture.

Glasgow's management of its tramways has from the start been marked by conservatism, but it has at the same time been marked by a steadily progressive spirit. The lines of Liverpool—which have also been municipalized—have recently been converted to electricity, and these two cities now enjoy the cheapest and best rapid transit facilities, while at the same time they maintain the highest labor conditions to be found in Great Britain. There is every prospect, too, that the large profits which Glasgow has hitherto realized from its trams will be distinctly increased through electrical traction.

THE GAS COMPANY'S OFFER.

The People's Gaslight and Coke company has suggested to the Mayor that it will furnish gas free for 25,000 street lamps if released from its agreement to pay the city 3 1-2 per cent of its gross receipts yearly. Last year this percentage amounted to $306,000, while the city's gas bill was $472,000. The city would save about $160,000 this year were it to close with this offer. It would save something this year and the year after. But while the gross receipts of the company would increase rapidly the amount of free gas furnished by the company would be a fixed quantity, and before many years had gone by 3 1-2 per cent of the gross earnings would exceed the gas bills which the city would have to pay on the basis of $20 a lamp per year. Furthermore, with the extension of the city's electric lighting system there should be a steady decrease in the quantity of gas consumed by it.

If the law advisers of the municipal authorities are satisfied that the company can be held to this agreement, entered into under the Washburne administration, to pay the city 3 1-2 per cent of its gross earnings, then so valuable an asset as this never should be surrendered. The quasi-partnership of the municipality with the gas company will insure it a certain and growing revenue.

It is understood that this offer to furnish 25,000 lamps free is coupled with the further condition that all suits brought by the city attacking the company in any way shall be dropped. Apparently the company apprehends that one of these suits may go against it, or it is afraid this litigation will have a bad effect upon its securities. If this 3 1-2 per cent agreement were not in existence and the company offered to supply considerable free gas in return for the abandonment of pending litigation the offer might deserve consideration. But if that agreement can be enforced—and the offer of the company is an indication that the corporation considers it enforcible—then there is no reason why the city should make concessions of any kind. It should certainly hang on to that fruitful 3 1-2 per cent.

WIDENING HALSTED STREET.

Some West-Siders are suggesting the widening of Halsted street between the two branches of the river, and one of the Aldermen announces that he will urge the matter in the Council.

London is carrying out an extensive scheme for a broad thoroughfare between the Strand and Oxford street. New York City has for several years been engaged in opening up a new thoroughfare on the East Side to parallel Broadway. Boston has long discussed the feasibility of widening Washington street, its principal retail street, and Philadelphia is just now debating the question of cutting a new diagonal thoroughfare for an approach to its great park.

It is a novelty, however, for a city hardly more than two generations old, and a Western city at that, with its characteristically straight and spacious streets, to be proposing street widening. Still, that Halsted street, if its width could be expanded from 59 feet to 100 feet, with liberal proportions given to its sidewalks, would enter upon a new career, as well as assume a more impressive aspect, is probable. Its sidewalks are now inconveniently crowded nights and mornings, and the pavement is often thronged at many points with traffic teams.

The improvement suggested would, of course, involve the moving back of or the cutting away of a portion of the buildings on one side of the street, and the expense would naturally fall chiefly upon the property facing upon or closely adjacent to the street. If these interests should be disposed to enter upon such an improvement its feasibility would then become a matter for serious consideration. The idea, however, appears at present to be the property of a limited number of persons, and any early change in the dimensions of this busy avenue seems unlikely.

If some Alderman could devise means for keeping the present width of the pavement—which is nearly new—on the part of the street it is desired to widen fairly clean, he would effect a public improvement which, if less dramatic than the one proposed, would be warmly appreciated by thousands of residents and travelers along that thoroughfare.

ARBOR AND BIRD DAY.

Various dates during the last few weeks have been observed in different parts of the country, chiefly by the public schools, as Arbor day, or as Arbor and Bird day.

Owing to the climatic variations between the northern and southern parts of this State, different days are chosen for Arbor and Bird day in different sections, and, perhaps, the observance suffers somewhat in volume of interest for this reason. It is also true that, although something has been done in the way of planting trees by the public schools of the State for twenty or twenty-five years back, the subject has been too often and too generally neglected. Under the stimulus, however, of the present State Superintendent of Schools, Mr. Bayliss, Arbor and Bird day is coming into increasing prominence, and in response to the special efforts of the County Superintendent of Schools to improve the equipment and surroundings of the country schools of Cook County, an unusual amount of tree planting has been done in the yards of these schools within the last two weeks. Many junior Audubon societies are also in existence in this county, some of them numbering from 500 to 1,000 members.

This is the thirteenth year in which Arbor day has been observed in the public schools of New York State, and the interest there has grown in a marked degree. Last year 229,616 trees were planted by teachers and scholars in 10,251 school districts of that State.

Possibly Wisconsin leads all the States in the energy and enthusiasm with which Arbor and Bird day is celebrated. This year the observance fell on the 3d of this month, and all other exercises were set aside in the public schools of every city and town throughout the State. The State Superintendent of Schools prepared a handsome souvenir pamphlet of the occasion, and the Governor issued a proclamation requesting that the day be observed "by the planting of trees, by the adornment of schools and public grounds, and by suitable exercises having for their object the advancement of the study of arbor culture, the promotion of a spirit of protection to birds and trees, and the cultivation of an appreciative sentiment concerning them." Great interest has been taken at the university at Madison in this observance in Wisconsin.

In our own commonwealth, where foliage is less abundant than in the Badger State, Arbor and Bird day well deserves the more earnest recognition which it is receiving.

HOW SPECULATORS AID FARMERS.

The commission created by Congress to investigate the industrial conditions of this country has made an interesting report on the distribution of farm products, in which it unreservedly takes the ground that the grain speculators are friends of the farmer. The report is concurred in by every member of the commission and is signed by the chairman, Senator Kyle of South Dakota, who was originally a strong Granger and a Populist, but who has become convinced that the old crusade against Boards of Trade was a mistake.

Senator Kyle's commission states that the American system of distributing farm products is "essentially a speculative system from beginning to end," and it believes both the producer and the consumer are benefited by the fact. Somebody must take the speculative risks of changes in the market between the time when the crops are harvested and the time when they are used by the consumer. The farmer might store his grain himself, but he would have to insure it and take the chances of loss in various forms. This would require more capital than he possesses, and if he were to borrow for this hazardous purpose he would have to pay higher interest than before. For similar reasons the consumer cannot store the grain in large quantities and keep it until he is ready to use it.

The result is that a separate class of experts has been developed to make a business of storing the crops and taking the chances of loss and gain involved in that function. The speculators of the corn and wheat pits are the distributers of the nation's farm products. Senator Kyle's commission finds that these men do the work on a closer margin of cost than the farmer could do it. Thus the farmer gets better prices and the consumer gets cheaper bread than if there were no professional speculators. Intense competition among the dealers themselves tends constantly to cut down their own profits and to bring producer and consumer closer together. They are forced constantly to seek to reduce the risks of their business, while the mails and the telegraph enable the farmer to keep thoroughly informed on the latest turn of the market. He can convert his crop quickly into cash capital and turn his attention to preparing for the next crop, leaving the speculators to attend to the risks and worries of distribution.

The commission is correct in its conclusion that Boards of Trade are legitimate and useful institutions, which perform a definite function and are of value to the farmer. All farmers would be convinced of this fact, as Senator Kyle has been, if they could study the subject in all its aspects as he has done.

SYMPATHY BAD FOR SOLDIERS.

General Chaffee has sent to the War department an elaborate denial of certain statements as to the comparative inferiority and inadequacy of American army management as exemplified in the march of the relief column to Pekin. These statements were made by a newspaper correspondent, whose article on "A Comparison of the Armies in China" was printed in the January number of Scribner's Magazine. The word of the commanding General on these points is decisive and will be accepted as such by the public. At the close of his article General Chaffee touches upon a wider aspect of army criticism. He calls attention to the injurious effects produced upon soldiers by exaggeration of their hardships, or even by frequent reference to their privations. This, also, is a subject on which a veteran like General Chaffee is well fitted to speak with authority.

The General calls attention to the absence of the cheery songs that formerly enlivened the hours around the campfire after a hard day's march. He misses the camp joker, who was always on hand in the '60s to provide the best available substitute for water or food when the men happened to be deprived of these owing to some incident of war or the march. Every honest soldier knows that hardships are never caused willfully by his government or his officers, yet there are, now "baleful countenances when hardships accumulate and distress surrounds," where formerly there was cheerful stoicism and a sense of pride in being able to endure discomforts. The change has been accompanied with a "marked decay of individual will power, without which nothing difficult can be accomplished by an army."

This weakening of the fiber of the army is ascribed by General Chaffee largely to the modern practice of dwelling much upon the privations or fancied abuses to which our soldiers are subjected whenever the army is called to do emergency work. "Soldiers do not like sympathy," says General Chaffee. "Sympathy is for women and children." Yet if soldiers be perpetually coddled and commiserated upon the hard time they are having, they will in time believe themselves abused and will act accordingly. "Commend our soldiers for manfully undergoing privations and they will readily respond again, but prate of their privations, deficiencies, and heavy burdens and they will soon learn to dread the hour that shall disturb their ease." There is sound sense in General Chaffee's words. Exaggerated sympathy can never make a good soldier, though it may demoralize a good army.

THE "HOG COMBINE."

A discreditable state of affairs in regard to the distribution of patronage in the House of Representatives at Washington was revealed by an investigating committee during the closing hours of the last session. In the rush of other matters the subject escaped public attention, but the report has now been made public, and it is interesting reading. It reveals the existence of a small clique of Republican members who have united to control all the patronage in the House, and who have thereby won for themselves the title of the "Hog Combine."

There are 357 employés in the House of Representatives, whose annual salaries aggregate $400,000. The appointment of nearly all these persons is in the hands of three or four elective officers of the House—namely: the Clerk, Doorkeeper, Sergeant-at-Arms, and Postmaster. The particular evil revealed by the investigators is the manipulation of the House pay roll by these elective officers so that the salaries of the entire list were bunched and the places distributed among the friends of the combine. Congressman—now Governor—Stone of Pennsylvania is credited with the origination of this scheme for a monopoly of patronage.

While the "Hog Combine" appears to have kept itself free from criminal corruption, its methods of operation have been harmful to the public service. The investigation brought out the fact that the employés are appointed without reference to their fitness, but solely with reference to the supposed importance of the Congressman back of each man. Though the employés are appointed by the four elective officers above named, the appointments are usually made on the recommendation of a Congressman in the dominant party. The "combine" had further narrowed this patronage power to its own limited circle and had then evened up the partition of spoils by compelling appointees to divide salaries. Thus a superintendent of the document-room, with a salary of $2,000, had to pay $400 to a folder. A reading clerk with a salary of $3,600 was compelled to hand over $1,600 annually to the disbursing clerk, and so on. If a member of the Michigan delegation thought he was not getting his share of the patronage he compelled some other member's appointee to split salaries with his man.

The whole business is as unwholesome as it is petty and disgraceful to the men concerned in it. It deserves the contempt with which Speaker Reed always regarded it. The combine has remained intact through several Congresses, but the revelations of the investigating committee will probably put an end to it. When the House meets next winter it should lose no time in taking the necessary steps to make this kind of a combine impossible.

THE lesson seems to be that the Democratic illiterates of Baltimore should go to night school.

MAYOR HARRISON tells the Boston Herald that asphalt and brick make the ideal pavements for residence streets. Unless the Hon. Hinky Dink disapproves, therefore, this goes.

THE New York Judge who holds that "rubberneck" is not an opprobrious epithet has never had it shot at him, perchance, by some indignant party of the first part.

MR. EVARTS FROM A RAILWAY PLATFORM.

For nearly half a century the late William M. Evarts headed the list of American "after-dinner speakers," on which ground, in a pun worthy of its victim, he was once trapped by a superior officer.

In a Presidential tour through the South, more than twenty years ago, Mr. Evarts accompanied President and Mrs. Hayes, taking upon himself the tiresome duty of speechmaking from the car platform. At one place the travelers were called out before breakfast, and as President Hayes appeared he was roundly cheered. After a few words he introduced his Secretary of State, who waited for his own customary quota of applause. None was forthcoming, however, and a little piqued, Mr. Evarts said: "Evidently you cannot cheer before breakfast," and sat down.

"Evidently," cried the President, jumping to his feet, "Mr. Evarts cannot speak until after dinner!" and amid the laugh that followed the engineer unwittingly relieved the situation by starting the train.

The young people of the party laid a wager with Mr. Evarts that he could not make a pun on each town where he spoke, pinning their hope of victory on the name Chattanooga. As the crowd at that station clamored for a speech, the Secretary pleaded a husky voice as excuse for only a few Chattanoogatory remarks.

Still less nugatory, perhaps, was his bon mot at a Georgia station. The exigencies of even a special time card made long stops impossible, yet much of the allotted time was everywhere occupied by local brass bands playing "Hail to the Chief" and by the Mayor's address of welcome. One of the President's sons surreptitiously arranged with the conductor to start the train gently the moment the band stopped playing.

Mr. Evarts had reached the middle of one of his famous sentences when he perceived the train was slipping out.

"I have often been criticised for my long sentences," he began, "but I can never," raising his voice with each word, "make a sentence long enough to reach—back—to—you!"

A burst of laughter and applause trickled after the train, for that time, in truth, the brilliant Secretary of State spoke "after dinner."—Youth's Companion.

The Billoustine.

One of Mrs. Camp-Cook's friends came to her rescue by passing the hat and collecting ten dollars; and Fra McGinnis condescended to bury a cheese sandwich and a bottle of beer. Then he relapsed into his de luxe attitude, and another long silence fell. When the guests finally exhibited symptoms of departing the hostess rose and addressed the Fra.

"Perhaps," said she, "you would like to retire."

"Excepting Minneapolis," he replied, "there is no place I would rather go to than to bed."

After an effusion of admiration from the departing guests, the Fra stalked to his bedchamber, and shortly afterward there was a deuce of a commotion, climaxing in a crash. It developed that Mrs. Camp-Cook had sent a maid servant several times to the Fra's room to make certain that he lacked for nothing, and that the Fra, losing patience, had thrown the maid down stairs. Above her wails could be heard the voice of the Fra, in sonorous deprecation:

"Damme, Laura. I want to be let alone!"

Fortunately the maid was not much hurt, except in her dignity, and the incident passed.

As this seemed to us rather complicated we queried our correspondents (such of them as we could reach last night), and received some simpler remedies—to wit:

CONFESSIONS of a REFORMED MESSENGER BOY

HOW 142 BECAME A WALKING DELEGATE.

"I was late one Saturday night an' dere wasn't a t'ing doing. Me an' Mike an' 327 had been acrost de street to de pie foundry four times after sinkers an' t'ree in de dark," said the Reformed Messenger Boy. "327 had cleaned up de bull gang wid de bones an' 118 was tellin' how he drempt de turkey row t'ree nights runnin' an' was goin' to play eight cents in bot' drawin's on Monday. It was slower dan Sout' Water street on a Sunday.

"Most Saturday nights den was all right, all right. Almost always dey was somethin' doin' down to Harrison Street Station on a Saturday what give de kids a chance to work a strong graft. De way it was, was like dis:

"De big guy wid de gold star would come into de front offis on a Saturday an' start a game of talk wid de Lord Chief Justice.

"'I got to buy a grand pianny fer de loved ones at home,' one of 'em says, 'an' I need t'ree hundred bones.'

"'I cou'd use a few bucks in my bizness, too,' says de udder.

"'Besides, I t'ink it's time de vicious an' immoral charackters on de levee realizes dat we're goin' to stop de reign of crime an' carnival of vice now prevailin' in dis district,' says de gold star.

"'No matter if we have to touch 'em up every Saturday night.'

"'I'll have 250 of de depraved an' debased pinched,' says de gold star, 'an' dat ought to be wort' two hundred apiece to us, if like de bailer, splits his money t'ree ways.'

"Den dey'd get some jay wid a bunch of spinach on his chin to make a holler an' dey'd send out about two dozen bulls to make what de peppers de nex' mornin' 'ld call a 'Raid on de Levee. Police Determined to Cleanse de Plague Spot.'

"When dey get de cells all full de 'Sarge' telephones over to 18 offis an' two of us kids goes down. All de guys an' daisies in de clink wants to send fer de Aldermun er de saloonkeeper to git 'em out, an' a wise kid could git frum a quarter to a imitation diamond earring out of every one of 'em. I've made as much as ten bones on a raid lots of times.

"'IT AIN'T NO GAME,' SAYS MIKE."

"But dis Saturday night dere wasn't a t'ing doin'. Me an' 327 was jest givin' a new kid de t'irty t'ird degree when de telephone bell rings an' we pipes off de manager.

"'Cedarhurst Villa Gowif club,' he says. 'Yes m'um. Six boys all day tomorrow,' he says, 'to Caddy. Yes m'um. 8:10 train in de mornin'. D'you want big boys? Jes as they run. Yes m'um. All right, m'um. I'll pick out boys what knows somethin' about it. Yes m'um.'

"'Does eny of you kids know anythin' about de game of gowif?' says de manager, puttin' his head out in de back room.

"I'm wise dat he never heard of it before hisself, so I makes a bluff.

"'Yessir,' says I, 'me an' Mike an' 327 plays it on our night off over at 327's house. It's a kind of cross between mumble-te-peg an' seven-up.'

"'Do you know how to caddy?'

"'Yessir. Dat's where you takes a base when yere pardner renigs an' muffs de ball.'

"'All right,' says de manager, 'you an' 327 an' Mike an' de nex' t'ree kids go on home an' take de 8:10 train on de Northwestern out to de Cedarhurst Villa Gowif club. Dey want you out dere all day tomorrer.'

"So us kids goes on out in de alley an' I says: 'Kids, we got to git wise to what we're goin' up aginst. Let's go see Rafferty.'

"Everybody knows de only Rafferty. He's de great referee. He refereed de great 'Buffalo Kid' an' 'Denver Bum' fight las' mont', an' when he ain't refereeing he tends bar over to Hogan's. Him an' me is ole fren's an' I leads de kids in an' says: 'Mike, what's de game of gowif?'

"'It ain't no game,' says Mike, settin' up de brown pop to de gang, 'it's a fashnubble disease like appendicitus. When you git gowif you break out in red spots all over de body. Den you take his rubber ball away frum yere little brudder an' take it out in de back yard an count 'one, two, three, four.' Den you swat de ball wid a shinny stick an' it goes flyin' over into Murphy's potato patch. If Murphy's goat don't eat de ball you chase yere little brudder over to git it an' den you swat it agin.'

"AN' WE SWIPES HALF A BUNCH OF BANANS."

"'Mike,' I says, 'what's a caddy?'

"'You remimber,' says Mike, 'whin yere old man ust to go huntin' robin red breasts an' McGuire's tame pigeons on th' prairie lot sout' of de dump? He took along wid him de old setter dog fer to run after de birds whin he shoots 'em an' bring 'em back in his mout'. Dat's de caddy's job, an' den, out in de country where de big guys plays de game, de caddy carries a bag on his back wid a ax an' a crowbar an' all de udder tools in it.'

"It was 2 o'clock in de mornin' by dis time an' us kids makes up our mind it wouldn't pay to go home, so we hustles out to de end of de government pier fer to do a little fishin' an' git a dip in de drink. On de corner of de alley nex' to Hogan's dere was a Dago sleeper an' we swipes half a bunch of banans an' a orange apiece fer breakfast.

"De manager gives us de coin fer car fare de night before, but we gits on de train widout buying de tickets an' whin de con comes along 327 does his cry-baby act.

"327 is a little kid, wid yellah hair an' blue eyes, an' when de con comes along he was a-snivelin' an' a-cryin'.

"'I had de money fer us six kids to go out to de Cedarhurst Gowif club,' he says, a-sobbin' an' a-cryin', 'an' I lost it. We got to git out dere someway,' he says, 'er I'll lose my job an' my fadder 'll lick me,' he says.

"'I HAD DE MONEY FER US SIX KIDS TO GO OUT TO DE CEDARHURST GOWIF CLUB,' HE SAYS, A-SOBBIN' AN' A-CRYIN'."

"I knows dat 327 never had no fadder, an' jes' to make de play stronger I pretends to swipe 327 on de kisser. Den he howls an' a ole daisy across de aisle gits up an' says 'shame on you' to me, an' asks 327 what's de matter wid him.

"He's doin' de cry act de best he kin, an' pretty soon de ole daisy loosens up an' says to de con, 'Here, I'll pay de fare fer dese children.'

"Dat puts us kids 60 cents apiece ahead of de game, an' so we goes into de smoker an' blows ourself fer a pack of cigs.

"When we gits off at de Cedarhurst Villa station dere's a bunch of barefooted kids standin' on de platform. I says to one of 'em, 'Hey, kid, where's de gowif club?' an' he says, 'Dat's fer me to know an' you to find out.' Den I licks him, an' when I lets him up he says him an' de odder kids is de caddies out to de gowif club, an' dey all got fired cause dey pinched too many gowif balls.

"When I heard dat I says to 327, 'Dese guys out here dey brung us out here to rat de jobs of dese kids. Dese kids is fired fer workin' dere regular graft too hard. But us kids ain't no scabs. What you kids want to do,' I says, 'is to organize a union.' I says, 'Did you all git fired?' I says. 'No,' says de kid I licked, 'Tommy Edward didn't, because he never pinched no balls, an' stands in wid de greenkeeper.' 'I'll fix him,' I says, 'but first you must orgernize de union,' I says, 'an' den I'll go an' see de main guy at de gowif club.'

"So de kids orgernized de union an' 'lected me de walkin' delegate. First I licks Tommy Edwards an' chased him home. Den I goes up to de clubhouse an' says us kids from 18 offis didn't scab nobody's job, an' if dey wanted caddies dey got to deal wid an' recernize de union,' I says. An' dey had to give in. And I tole dose regaler kids dey mus'n't make de work so coarse after dis."

"HEH, KID, WHERE'S DE GOWIF CLUB?"

Yesterday and Today.

I didn't have a dollar on the market anywhere.
I got a tip or two, but didn't have the wad to spare.
When prices went a-soaring, 'twas with natural regret
I remembered that I hadn't had a chance to place a bet;
No; I didn't have a single dollar on the market; which Explains why, yesterday, I didn't rank among the rich.

I didn't have a dollar on the market. But I try
To feel no vain regret for chances that went slipping by.
I saw how the quotations shaped men's hopes and discontents
As they jumped up to 1,000, and went back to 30 cents.
I didn't have a dollar on the market anyway,
And that is why I happen not to be dead broke today.

His Money Safe.

An incredible story is told in the Waldorf-Astoria of a young man who, by blind, stupid, bull luck managed to clean up nearly $100,000 in Union and Northern Pacific in the last ten days. Of course we all know the market has been A. O. T. for a purchase, but lots and cords of sensible fellows did not have either the money or the nerve to get in. Our young friend fell in. The possession of so much money all at once made him cautious, and he could hardly get to his bank early enough to deposit his certified check for the full amount of his winnings. Then hearing that certain financial institutions were reported as shaky he got on the safe side by drawing a check for $80,000 payable to himself, had it certified, and stowed it away in his pocketbook. "My bank," says he, "is one of the strongest in New York, and I look for no trouble. But in case of accident that $80,000 is safe anyway."—New York Press.

AMONG THE NEW BOOKS.

DREYFUS AND HIS FIVE YEARS OF LIVING DEATH.

Famous Prisoner Tells of His Arrest, Degradation, and Confinement—Deprivations and Torments That Recall the Days of the Inquisition—Wretched Food and Not Even the Common Necessities of Life Were Given Him—Devotion to His Wife.

"YOUR condemnation is the greatest infamy of the century." Such was the declaration of Maître Demange to his client, Alfred Dreyfus, the day after the wronged Frenchman had been sentenced to solitary confinement for life. Any one who reads the prisoner's "Five Years of My Life, 1894-1899," which McClure, Phillips & Co. have just published in English in this country, can but agree that the eminent French lawyer's declaration was in every way just and apt. The nineteenth century can show no other piece of injustice so inhuman, so cruel, and so infamous as was that committed in 1894 by unprincipled officials against Alfred Dreyfus. Only in the middle ages can its parallel be found.

Were there any doubt as to the innocence of Dreyfus, the book he has just published would serve to banish that doubt. The diary he wrote during the first seventeen months of his confinement on Devil's Island, and which is now printed after having been for over three years in the hands of the French officials, is not the literary creation of a martyr guilty of treason. The despair it voices is too genuine, the protestations of innocence too simple and direct, and the patriotism rings too true to be written merely for effect by a man conscious of his guilt. It is a record terrible in the evidence it furnishes of human cruelty and depravity, wonderful in the proof it gives of the powers of human endurance, and ennobling in the splendid heroism, constancy, and fortitude its every page voices.

The book is dedicated to "My Children," and contains as an introduction to the principle statement: "In the following pages I tell the story of my life during those five years in which I was cut off from the world of the living. The events which took place in France in connection with the trial of 1894, and during the following years, remained entirely unknown to me until the trial at Rennes."

An "Editor's Preface," in which the circumstances of Dreyfus' trial and the events consequent upon it are outlined, is followed by a short autobiographical sketch, and the scene of the famous and infamous attempt by Paty de Clam to force Dreyfus to show some signs of guilt while writing at his dictation some extracts from the bordereau is described in simple but telling language. During the seventeen days which followed his arrest he was subjected to frequent cross-examinations by Du Paty. He says: "That my brain did not give way during these endless days and nights was not the fault of Commandant du Paty. I had neither paper nor ink with which to fix in writing every moment turning over in my head fragments of sentences which I had drawn from him and which only led me further astray. But no matter what my tortures may have been, my conscience was awake and unerringly dictated my duty to me. 'If you die,' it said to me, 'they will believe you guilty; whatever happens you must live to cry aloud your innocence in the face of the world.'"

After his arrest and degradation he wrote his wife from the Santé prison: "I can well excuse this rage of a patriotic people, who have been told that there is a traitor, . . . but I want to tell you that they have told what traitor is not I." This sentiment characterizes his letters throughout his entire imprisonment, even in the days when his suffering and despair seem unbearable—he expresses no resentment against the French people or against France for the attitude taken toward him, but says that attitude is a natural one, and his sole desire is to be able to prove to them that the traitor against whom they rave is not he.

Not being permitted to see his wife was one of the bitterest trials of his imprisonment. The official heartlessness, which reached its climax during the last years on Devil's Island, was shown from the first. When Mme. Dreyfus was allowed to come to him for the first time, weeks after his arrest, he met her "in the prison parlor. It was a dark room, divided in the middle by two parallel latticed gratings. On the further side of one of these gratings stood my wife, while I was forced to remain behind the second grating." Two such meetings were permitted, and then came the degradation and Dreyfus' removal to the Ile de Ré. Here, after much solicitation, the faithful couple were allowed to meet again.

"I was brought into the registry office. . . . The office is a small, narrow, long room, whitewashed and almost bare. My wife was seated at one end and the director of the prison in the middle of the room; I had to stay by the door at the opposite end of the room from my wife. In the front of the glass door outside guards were stationed.

"The director warned us that we were forbidden to speak of anything concerning my trial."

Four interviews under such conditions were granted them, and then came his horrible voyage to Devil's Island. The diary begins the day after Dreyfus arrived on the island, and the story it tells of tortures endured by him reads like a chapter from the record of the Inquisition. Everything that could be devised to make his imprisonment uncomfortable and his degradation keenly and constantly felt was done. Even the common necessities of life—wholesome food and clean clothing—were denied him, and it would seem from the record that the desire and purpose of the officials were so to mistreat him that his death could but result.

Here are extracts from various letters that give an idea as to what was given him as food:

"At 10 o'clock they bring me my day's food—a bit of canned pork, some rice, some coffee berries in filthy condition, and a little moist sugar. I have no means of roasting the coffee, which in bitter derision is given to me raw.

"Again, I had only a bit of bread for my dinner, and I was fainting. The guards, seeing my bodily weakness, passed in to me a bowl of their broth.

"Today I boiled my meat with some wild peppers I had found in the island. This took three hours, during which my eyes suffered horribly.

"To cook my meat I have contrived a grill from an old piece of sheet iron which I picked up in the island. For drink, I have water. My food is ill prepared in old tin cans. I have nothing with which to clean these properly, and have no plates.

"Yesterday I asked the commandant of the island for one or two plates, of no matter what kind; he answered that he had none. I am forced to exercise my ingenuity and to eat either off paper or old scraps of iron gathered on the island. The dirt I eat in this way is inconceivable."

For over a month Dreyfus lived thus without dishes, until finally the commandant relented and gave him four plates. The quality of the food, however, remained virtually unchanged during the five years of his confinement. When one remembers that the climate was equatorial—in one place he records a heat of 113° Fahrenheit—that he was frequently kept confined in his hut from six to eight weeks at a time, that the hut often was so damp that everything in it became moldy, and that his food was such as it was, one can but wonder that he did not die from causes purely physical. Add to these deprivations the torments inflicted by having to live in almost absolute silence, by being never for an instant, day or night, alone, by having news from his wife only once a month, and then having these letters only mere fragments of messages written three months before, and which had passed through the hands of the French officials, every reference to his case being cut out—and finally only copies of these fragments being given him—add to these and countless other mental torments to the physical ills and deprivations Dreyfus endured for five years and it seems almost incredible that he ever returned alive and came to his trial at Rennes.

The book is a record of a heroism that has never been surpassed and has had its equal only in the lives of some of the Christian martyrs. Together with this heroism is a devotion to wife and children that is as beautiful and enobling as it was constant and high, and which results in the book's not only compelling the reader's heartiest admiration and respect, but winning for its author unbounded sympathy and compassion.

The Visits of Elizabeth.

BY ELINOR GLYN.

THE TRIBUNE has secured to print the latest London literary sensation, "The Visits of Elizabeth." The author, whose name in private is Elinor Glyn, is one of the brightest writers of the day, and her pages will be found to be piquant, witty, and thoroughly enjoyable. Herewith is presented the seventh and last installment:

CHEVENIX CASTLE,
November 26th.

DEAREST MAMMA:

Octavia is writing to you, and we have such a piece of news for you; but first, I must tell you about Thursday and yesterday. The morning after the ball no one came down till lunch, and in the afternoon Lady Doraine suggested we should have some tableaux in the evening, and so we were busy all the time arranging them. They were all fresh, but it was so amusing. Mrs. Pike lent every one of her tea gowns—she has dozens—and they did splendidly for the Queen of Sheba; and Mr. Pike played Charles I. having his head cut off, as Lady Doraine told him he had just the type of lofty melancholy face for that. I was the old woman in the shoe with all the biggest people for children; but the best of all was Dolly Tenterdown as "Bubbles." Lord Doraine, and Mr. Wertz, and Tom, and some others played "bridge" all the time while we were arranging them; but Lord Valmond was most useful, and in such a decent temper. After they were over we danced a little, and it was all delightful.

Yesterday, the day of the county ball in Chevenix, they shot again; and it rained just as we all came down ready to start for the lunch; so we couldn't go, and had to lunch indoors without most of the men. Mr. Pike hadn't gone shooting, because I heard Tom saying the night before to Lady Doraine that he wouldn't chance the party being murdered again, and that she must keep him at home somehow. And she did, and taught him patience in the hall, after lunch, and Mrs. Pike went and wanted to learn it, too, but Lady Doraine—who was lovely to her—some how did not make much room on the sofa, so she had to go and sit somewhere else.

Half the people were playing "bridge," and the rest were very comfortable, and smoking cigarets, of course; so Mrs. Pike did, too. Her case is gold, with a splendid monogram in big rubies on it; but I am sure it makes her feel sick, because she puffs it out and makes it burn up as soon as she can without its being in her mouth. She had to go and lie down after that, as she said she would be too tired for the ball; but nobody paid much attention.

It was more lively at tea time, when the guns came in. And Lord Doraine would sit by me; he talked about poetry, and said dozens of nice things about me, and all sorts of amusing ones about every one else; and Lord Valmond, who had gone to write some letters at a table near, seemed so put out with every one talking, that he could not keep his attention, and at last he tore them up, and came and sat close to us, and told Lord Doraine that he could see Mr. Wertz was longing for "bridge." And so he got up, and laughed in such a way, and said "All right, Harry, old boy." And Valmond got crimson—I don't know what at—and looked as cross as a bear for a few minutes. We had rather a hurried dinner.

My white chiffon is as pretty as the tulle, and Octavia was quite pleased with me. There were omnibuses and two broughams for us to go in. Octavia took me with her alone in one. I wanted to go in one of the omnibuses—it looked so much gayer—but she wouldn't let me. It is not much of a drive, as you know, and we all got there at the same time almost, and our party did look so smart as we came in.

Octavia sailed like a Queen up the room to a carpeted raised place at the end, and there held a sort of court.

The Duchess of Glamorgan was already there with her three daughters, and their teeth stuck out just like Mrs. Vavasour's; only they look ready to bite, and she was always smiling. The men of their party were so young and looked as if they would not hurt a fly, and the Duchess had me introduced to her and asked about you. And Mrs. Pike tried to join in the conversation, and the Duchess fixed on her pince-nes and looked at her for quite ten seconds, and then said, when she had retired a little, "Who is this gorgeous person?" And when I said Mrs. Pike, she said, "I don't remember the name," in a tone that dismissed Mrs. Pike from the universe as far as she was concerned; and Jane Reese says she is almost the only Duchess who won't know parvenues, and that is what makes her set so dull.

There were such a lot of funny, frumpy people at the other end of the room—"the rabble," Mrs. Pike called them. "Let us walk round and look at the rabble," she said to Lord Doraine, who was standing by her. And they went.

I had such lots of partners, I don't know what any one else did; I was enjoying myself so, until after supper, which I had with Lord Valmond, and Octavia and the little Duke were at our table, too, and it was so gay. But after that there was a polka. I danced it with some idiot, who almost at once let yards and yards of my chiffon frills get torn, so I was obliged to go to the cloakroom to have it pinned up. It was a long way off, and when I came out my partner had disappeared, and there was no one about but Lord Doraine; and the moment I saw him I hated the look in his eyes, they seemed all swimmy; and he said in such a nasty, fat voice: "Little darling, I have sent your partner away, and I am waiting for you. Come and sit out with me among the palms." And I don't know why, but I felt frightened, and so I said, No; that I was going back to the ballroom. And he got nearer and nearer, and caught hold of my arm, and said, "No, no, you shall not unless you give me a kiss first."

And he would not let me pass. I can't imagine why, mamma, but I never felt so frightened in my life; and just then, walking aimlessly down the passage, came Lord Valmond, and he saw us and came up quickly, and I was so glad to see some one that I ran to him, as Lord Doraine let me pass dir ectly he caught sight of Harry—I mean Lord Valmond—and he was in such a rage when he saw how I was trembling, and said, "What has that brute been saying to you?" and looked as if he wanted to go back and fight him; but I was so terrified that I could only say, "Do come away!" So we went and sat in the palm place, and there was not a soul there, as every one was dancing; and I really don't know how it happened, I was so upset about that horrid Lord Doraine, that Harry tried to comfort me, and—he kissed me again—and I hope you won't be very cross, mamma; but, somehow, I did not feel at all angry this time. And I thought he was fond of Mrs. Smith; but it isn't; it's me! And we are engaged. And Octavia is writing to you. And I hope you won't mind. And the post is off, so no more.

From your affectionate daughter,

ELIZABETH.

P. S.—I shall get married before the drawing-room in February, because then I can wear a tiara.

ISSUES DEATH CERTIFICATE.

Doctor Field of Detroit Decides That Miss Dora McDonald, Thought to Be in a Trance, Is Dead.

Detroit, Mich., May 12.—[Special.]—Dr. George S. Field today issued a death certificate in the case of Miss Dora McDonald, who, it was thought until today, might be in a trance. She died apparently on Friday night, but as warmth returned to the region of the heart afterwards the doctor refused to certify to her death. He was also influenced by the fact that the young woman had two years before remained unconscious for four days. Today, however, all doubt was removed. Her death was the result of perotonitis.

BOYS AMBUSH SCHOOL JANITOR.

Throw Stones and Other Missiles at Charles Bowen of Cornell Building—He Has Leaders Arrested.

An attack by boys on a school janitor resulted in the disabling of the man and the arrest of the leaders of the band of boys by the Grand Crossing police. Complaints had been made by the janitor, Charles Bowen, that the boys, who played in the Cornell School playground, in the evening, had defaced the building.

The sport of the boys was interrupted on Saturday night by the appearance of the janitor, and they declare that before they could escape from the yard one of their number had been struck by the man. The boys held a consultation, and as a result a load of ammunition was stored near the homeward trail of the enemy.

The ambush prepared for Bowen was entered unhesitatingly by him, and a shower of tin cans, paving blocks, and other missiles were thrown, most of them striking him.

Bowen was unable to capture any of the boys and after having several severe bruises about his head and body treated by a physician, he reported the affair to the police. Three hours later Benny Nelson, William Daney, John Duke, and Harry Alexander were arrested charged with being the leaders in the attack.

WEDDING AT CROW'S NEST.

William Winter Jefferson and Christie MacDonald Married at "Joe" Jefferson's Home.

Buzzards Bay, Mass., May 12.—[Special.]—A chapter in a pretty romance that dates back to the summer of 1898 was the marriage today of Christie MacDonald and William Winter Jefferson at Crow's Nest, the summer residence of the veteran actor, Joseph Jefferson, father of the groom, today.

A parlor car attached to the morning train from Boston brought the groom, the relatives, and a few immediate friends of the young couple, and all were soon on their way to the shores of Buttermilk Bay, better known as the Jefferson Colony.

It was the homecoming for the veteran actor and his son, who closed their professional season in Boston last night.

The bride had been at Crow's Nest for some days. The wedding took place at noon in the parlor, the Rev. E. A. Horton of Boston officiating. The bride was accompanied by her sister, Miss Belle MacDonald. H. V. V. Dodd of New York, an old and warm friend of the groom, was best man.

SEEK NEW HEAD FOR COLLEGE.

Successor of Dr. Carter as President of Williams Arouses Interest of the Alumni.

Williamstown, Mass., May 12.—[Special.]—The alumni and friends of Williams College will be on the anxious seat for the next two months while the trustees are making a hunt for a President to succeed Dr. Franklin Carter.

The name of James H. Canfield, Chancellor of the University of Ohio, and graduate with the class of '67, is talked of for the position, as is Hamilton W. Mabie of the class of '67, recently elected to lecture in Johns Hopkins University.

The fact that both Mr. Mabie and Mr. Canfield have been in town within a few weeks is considered significant.

The name of the Rev. Dr. Henry Hopkins of Kansas City, son of the late Mark Hopkins, is also under consideration.

Marquise de Fontenoy Letter.

Copyright, 1901, by the Marquise de Fontenoy.

YOUNG Somers Somerset, only son of Lady Henry Somerset of temperance fame, and who enjoys the distinction of being the only member of the English aristocracy who has graduated from an American university—namely, Harvard—is, it is feared, doomed to total blindness. A year or so ago he lost his sight eye through a shooting accident, and was warned at the time that he must not attempt to use the other eye for reading or writing for at least three years. In spite of his having obeyed these directions and a famous German oculist, he has now lost the use of his remaining eye, and has been taken off to Wiesbaden to be placed under the care of a specialist. But it is feared that the sight of his remaining eye is impaired beyond remedy, and the leading English oculists are unanimous in expressing the opinion that Lady Henry Somerset's brilliant and popular son is condemned to blindness for the remainder of his days.

He is naturally the object of widespread sympathy. He was brought up to look upon himself as the heir presumptive to his grandfather's dukedom of Beaufort, owing to the fact that the late Duke's eldest son, Lord Worcester, was regarded as a confirmed bachelor. To the amazement of everybody, the present Duke, after reaching the age of 50 in single blessedness, suddenly married the young and beautiful widowed Baroness de Tuyl (sister of the late Countess of Essex), who has since then given birth not only to several daughters but likewise to a couple of boys, the eldest of whom now bears the title of Marquis of Worcester, and will inherit the dukedom of Beaufort and the estates.

It was the present Duchess' 12-year-old son, by her first husband, whose carelessness and inexperience in the handling of firearms were responsible for the destruction of Somerset's right eye. Young Somerset is all the more to be pitied, as besides losing his prospects of inheriting the dukedom and estates, blindness will prevent his wooing fortune and fame in any other fashion. His mother has merely a life interest in her property, which reverts at her death to her distant kinsman, Lord Somers, and as his wife (sister of the Duke of St. Albans) is without fortune, the outlook for the young couple is far from bright.

The salary of Lord Roberts has just been increased by $2,500 a year, and, according to the new arrangement, he will receive $25,000 a year, that is to say, more than the Secretary of State for War, but less than the Judges of the Court of Appeal, and less, too, than half the Bishops who occupy seats in the House of Lords. Yet the commander-in-chief of the military forces in all parts of the vast British Empire assuredly occupies a more responsible position than the Bishop of a mere diocese, and under the circumstances it is somewhat difficult to understand the system by which the British government pays its principal servants.

People in this country possessed of Irish sympathies or affiliations will be interested to learn that King Edward has given orders to the effect that the following regimental marches should be used by the newly formed regiment of Irish Guards. For the slow march the tune of "Come Back to Erin" will be employed, while for the quick march "St. Patrick's Day" has been chosen.

It is not true that King Edward has caused the pet donkeys which used to draw the basket chaise, or garden chair, of his mother, Queen Victoria, to be killed in preference to selling them. On the contrary, he has caused them to be transferred to the royal paddocks at Hampton Court Palace, where they will spend the remainder of their days in ease and luxury. One of them, a superb white animal, presented to the late Queen by Lord Kitchener, is worth, according to Egyptian market prices, at least £2,500.

In view of the report mentioned in these columns the other day to the effect that Emperor Nicholas was interesting himself in behalf of Tolstoi, with a view to the annulment of the decree of excommunication issued against him by the synod of the national church, it may be stated that this is by no means the first time that a Muscovite monarch has actively interested himself in behalf of the famous author.

There are many people who may recall that Alexander III. had several long interviews with the Count, and forced the strictest orders that he should not be molested by either ecclesiastical or secular authorities, and that there should be no interference with his publications.

But few know that Emperor Nicholas I. was likewise a great admirer of Tolstoi, who in those days was a young Captain of artillery, full of enthusiasm about everything military. In some way a book which he had written about life in the Caucasus fell into the hands of the Emperor, Nicholas, who was not only delighted therewith but did not hesitate to expound the opinion that there was in the writer the stuff of a great and celebrated author. So imbued was he with this conviction that on ascertaining that Leo Tolstoi was serving in the Crimea against the allied forces of Great Britain, France, Turkey, and Sardinia, he immediately sent a message to the General commanding the division to which the Count belonged, commanding him to take special care of the young Captain, and to see that no harm befell him.

The General, who was entirely ignorant of Tolstoi's literary merits, and who believed that the Czar had some mysterious reason of his own for shielding Tolstoi from all harm, availed himself of some pretext or other to order the young Captain back from the fighting line, first of all to the rear, and then to Moscow.

It was in vain that Tolstoi protested and demanded the reason for what he looked upon as his military disgrace.

I sometimes wonder what would have happened if Tolstoi had been left with his guns facing the invaders of his country and cannot help thinking that we are in a measure indebted to the first Emperor Nicholas for these masterpieces of literature which bear the name of Leo Tolstoi.

The Grand Orient Lodge of the Freemasons of Italy, who, unlike their brethren in this country and in England, make a profession of atheism, have at length moved from the Borghese Palace at Rome. The latter was built by Pope Paul V. several centuries ago and was always regarded as the headquarters of the most devout Catholicism until the present head of the family lost both his reason and his fortune through reckless speculation. The palace, along with the other possessions of the illustrious patrician house of Borghese, thereupon passed into the hands of the trustees of the bankruptcy, who, despite the protests of the family and of the Vatican, rented the first floor to the Grand Orient Lodge of the Freemasons.

Young Prince Scipio Borghese, eldest son of the head of the family, and through his father's insanity now its virtual chief, has by means of a marriage with the colossally wealthy heiress of the Genoese Ferraris restored the fortunes of his house, effected a settlement with his father's creditors, and recovered possession of his ancestral palace. The Masons have moved to the Giustiniani Palace. The latter was built in 1580 in part with stones of Nero's bath. In 1170 an epidemic broke out in Rome, which destroyed the entire princely house of Giustiniani with the exception of Niccolo, a monk. He at once, by virtue of a papal bull, left his monastery, married, and raised twelve children. Having accomplished this duty to the Roman patriciate and to his house, he went tranquilly back to his monastery and died a monk. The present Prince Giustiniani, besides being a Neapolitan Duke, is likewise a British peer, as Earl of Newburg. It is financial trouble that has forced him to lease his palace.

BANK ALARM CALLS POLICE.

Stock-Yards Startled by the Gong in Front of Live Stock Depository—No Burglars Found.

The burglar alarm in front of the National Live Stock Bank at the Stock-Yards began to ring yesterday morning, and in less than ten minutes twenty policemen were on the spot, expecting to find burglars in the vault. No one was in sight, however, and the alarm wires apparently had not been tampered with. The alarm is a big gong inclosed in an iron box on the green plat in front of the bank. It is connected with wires which are attached to the vault doors and to wires which lead to the Stock-Yards Police Station. The alarm is the only one of its kind in Chicago, and when it begins to ring can be heard for several blocks.

Masonic Temple Theater Opens.

As the Masonic Temple Roof Garden Theater is on the underneath side of the roof the ill temper of last night's weather was not able to prevent a rousing opening. The theater was so packed that there was little standing room left. The bill was a fair one and it seemed to give enjoyment to the audience.

The occasion served to bring a new singer. Miss Fannie Brunswick, into the vaudeville ists. Miss Brunswick is a Chicago young woman who has been a member of the St. Louis section of the Castle Square Opera company a part of this season. Her friends were present in numbers last night to encourage her in the vaudeville venture, and several huge bouquets were handed over the footlights to her. Without the interest shown in her by her associates she probably would have been given a kindly welcome, however, as her voice proved of pleasing quality. She was nervous, but as the encores came she gained confidence.

Other entertainers on the bill were Alice Shay, the whistler, and her daughters; Lew Hawkins, the monologuist; the Dumonds, in an eccentric musical act; Filson and Errol, in a sketch, "A Trip on the Derby"; McFhee and Hill, acrobats; and the Hawthorn Sisters, ballad singers.

Sardou Play at Dearborn.

Victorien Sardou, in so far as his name goes, is being carelessly treated this week through the Dearborn stock company's use of one of his plays, the comedy, "A Scrap of Paper." The placards at the elevated stations announcing the revived speak of him as Victorean Sardou. The theater programs refer to him as Victorin Sardou.

On the stage itself, however, he is being treated with some respect. The company worked hard yesterday afternoon to surround the play with the blithe atmosphere it demands. The success was not absolute, but enough of the merriment of the play was transmitted to satisfy the demands of the audience. The piece is one of quaint conceit, and it has been used so little by stock companies that it has a wider appeal than the average of the plays revived by popular-price organizations.

Howell Hansell played the part of Prosper Couramont with considerable appreciation, but Miss Reals was not at ease in the rôle of Mlle. Susanne de Russeville. Edward Mackay appeared as Baron de la Glaciere, Hugh Ford as Brissemouche, and Louise Rial as Rosalie.

Having employed a play associated with the names of Mr. and Mrs. Kendal, the company next week is to use a piece hitherto not allowed outside the repertory of E. S. Willard. "The Middleman" will be the play.

The War of Wealth Revived.

"The War of Wealth," the play C. T. Dazey hoped would parallel the success of "In Old Kentucky," but which proved a disappointment to him and to Manager Jacob Litt, was revived by the Hopkins stock company yesterday. The play is written around an explosion scene, and if the rest of the piece were as effective as the scene itself the record of its career would be different from what it is.

The episode takes place in the second act. Sanford Farley, junior member of the banking firm of Warfield & Co., has planned to wreck that bank and to make it appear that the money he has stolen has been taken by robbers. He has drilled the safe door, and when he has taken the funds he intends to light the fuse which will blow the iron frame to fragments. But he is interrupted by the cashier, Philip Norwood, whom he fights, overcomes, and thrusts into the safe, clanging the door upon him. He has not time to fire the fuse before Warfield, the senior partner, comes clamoring to the outer door. He knows, however, that the cashier must soon suffocate in the airtight compartment and he flees. The bank President has seen Norwood thrown into the safe, but he cannot release him, as the time lock has been set. He finds an explosive upon the table, and in desperation he hurls it against the door, shattering it, and letting air in upon the suffocating victim.

The explosion was well handled yesterday and was just to the fancy of the audience. The mechanical appliances were those of Mr. Litt's original production.

The vaudeville numbers between the acts were supplied by Kelly and Violetta, McFee and Hill, the Hoopers, and Waterbury Brothers and Tenny.

On Tuesday Richard Buhler, leading man of the company, will have a benefit. Between two acts of the play of the regular play he will appear as Romeo in the balcony scene of "Romeo and Juliet."

The Victoria Theater ended its existence on Saturday night, when the receipts of the week were divided among the employés of the house. The stock company is homeless, but next week the theater, rechristened the New American, will be opened by Manager John Connors, proprietor of the Calumet Theater in South Chicago. He will place traveling companies in it, and the first play will be the well-worn "East Lynne."

"The Christian" entered the fourth, and next to the last, week of its local career at McVicker's Theater last night.

The last week of the engagement of Ward & Vokes in "The Head Waiters" at the Great Northern Theater began last night.

THEATRICALS IN NEW YORK.

Season Shows Little Signs of Waning, with Two New Plays to Be Produced This Week.

New York, May 12.—[Special.]—The theatrical season shows little sign of waning, as this week brings two new plays, with twice as many to follow within the next fortnight. One of the novelties is "The Prisoner of Algiers," a melodrama to be acted for the first time at the American tomorrow. It is by Frank Lindon and is a continuation of "Monte Cristo." After "The Prisoner of Algiers" a week will be given to "Rip Van Winkle." The American will close with "Kit Carson."

The other new piece to be disclosed tomorrow night is an extravaganza called "The King's Carnival" at the New York. The words are by Sydney Rosenfeld and the music by A. Baldwin Sloane.

The revival of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," which will celebrate its 100th time with souvenirs tomorrow, will be repeated on a short tour and then taken to Chicago for the summer.

The decision to use the Metropolitan as a music hall during the eleven weeks preceding the opening of the opera season on the third Monday in December is a victory for the Maurice Grau opera company over the stockholders of the Metropolitan Opera and Real Estate company, who did not want to see the building used for such a purpose.

LOVE IN NIELSEN'S QUARREL.

Romance and Finance Lead to Opera Singer's Break with Manager Frank Perley.

Should the quarrels of Alice Nielsen and Manager Frank Perley bring to an abrupt end the prosperous London engagement of "The Fortune Teller," as cable dispatches intimate, there will be little of the element of mystery or the unexpected in the outcome. The only surprise those familiar with the developments of the story will feel will be that the bond of financial success did not keep them together until the engagement had run its course.

The breach of friendly relations between the two has been a matter of fact since the middle of winter. Before Manager Perley took Miss Nielsen to London, it was stated by both persons that they would part business company as soon as the foreign trip was over. Since an outbreak which took place in Washington the first week in March, Mr. Perley and his prima donna have not spoken to each other. A letter from an American player in London shows how the necessary business intercourse has been carried on between them.

"They do not speak," says the writer, "except through the intermediary office of George Bowles, the press agent of the company. They are fighting like cats and dogs, but the company is doing so finely that neither will give up the chance of profits."

The cause of the rupture dates back even longer than the winter, and includes two other persons—Tom Williams, the San Francisco race track man, and Paul Steindorff, who until two months ago was the musical director of the company.

Mr. Williams was the original financial sponsor of Miss Nielsen, and through him Mr. Perley first became associated with the singer. It is supposed, indeed, the two men are still allies and nearly equally interested in the operas, "The Singing Girl" and "The Fortune Teller," which have given Miss Nielsen her stellar fame. Mr. Perley has been the practical theatrical man, and Mr. Williams the backer.

Romance also had its place in the arrangement, however, as rumor is agreed, and it was the rent in that lighter fabric that brought about the business rupture.

Mr. Williams is said to have been attracted by the personality of Miss Nielsen the first time he saw her. She then was singing a small rôle in an opera at the Tivoli Theater, San Francisco. His friendship was turned at once to her account. She was given a chance for study abroad, and then his influence helped her to a position with the Bostonians. Her own merit aided her to quick advancement. In "The Serenade" she won a remarkable success, and in two seasons Mr. Williams found the manager, Mr. Perley, who believed he could guide her to a stellar niche. His judgment was not at fault and in one year she was established as the first of the comic opera prima donnas of the country. During this time the friendship of Mr. Williams and Miss Nielsen continued, and on several occasions it was reported they intended to marry.

But last fall there came a change. Miss Nielsen is credited with being the author of it. Before the holidays it was known that Mr. Williams and the opera singer were at outs. In the winter the former was married to a California young woman, and the crisis approached. Miss Nielsen's actions related ostensibly to business. She had been paid a salary, and she declared she should have a percentage of the profits in addition. When Mr. Perley pointed to the contract she is reported to have said it meant nothing to her.

Failing to move him, she adopted different tactics. The musical director of a light opera organization is a personage of power. Mr. Steindorff likewise was friendly to the singer. With his assistance, it is said, she took upon herself the practical control of the company, setting Manager Perley and his orders at naught.

In Washington the manager took the situation by the horns by giving the musical director leave of absence for the months covered by his contract. So Mr. Steindorff remained in this country, to draw his salary, while another director was installed in his chair. Miss Nielsen, furious, but unwilling to forego the chance of a London triumph, announced she would leave Manager Perley at the end of the season.

It has been supposed either Klaw & Erlanger or Charles Frohman would engage her for next season. The opera, however, belong to Manager Perley, who is said to have Fanchon Thompson in mind as Miss Nielsen's successor. The opera "Mme. Sans Gene," which Charles Frohman is said to be negotiating for, has not yet been produced. George Edwardes is the owner of its rights.

Given of Decatur, Ill., are to be the first ones intrusted with this responsibility. They will act as agents from June 5 to July 4, when they will be succeeded by H. G. Sommers of Chicago and J. T. Henderson of Bloomington.

The following officers were elected: President, J. T. Henderson, Bloomington, Ill.; Vice President, J. F. Given, Decatur, Ill.; Secretary, H. G. Sommers, South Bend, Ind.; Treasurer, P. C. Hamilton, Champaign, Ill.

This was taken to Gavin's undertaking rooms in North Clark street. The boy lived at 48 East Huron street.

PREACH ON STOCK DEALS.

CHICAGO MINISTERS TALK OF LOSSES IN WALL STREET.

David Beaton Declares the Whole Practice of Speculation a Menace to Public Morals and Commercial Prosperity Such as Never Existed Before—Evil Example to the Young Sapping National Integrity—Jenkin Lloyd Jones Bewails the Tendency.

The stock market furnished the text for several sermons in Chicago pulpits yesterday. The Rev. David Beaton declared "the whole practice a menace to public morals and commercial prosperity." Dr. Joseph Stolz said those who gamble in the Stock Exchange are just as guilty as those who gamble in any other gambling house. The Rev. Jenkin Lloyd Jones intimated that the collapse of values and consequent losses of speculators might have a beneficial moral effect.

Effect on Public Morals.

"Stock Gambling and Public Morals" was the subject of the Rev. Mr. Beaton in Lincoln Park Congregational Church. He spoke in part as follows:

"The preacher is happily not called upon to apportion the blame among the gamblers in high places who recently have wrought such devastation. Nor is he called upon to sympathize with those who have lost money in the immoral effort to get something for nothing. His business is purely in the interest of souls. He is interested in two things: First, what sort of a civilization have we got, as judged by our financial practices? And, second, what influence does this stock gambling have on public morals?

"We are fond of exalting our civilization as Christian, and I suppose most of the frenzied men and women who were in the thick of the carnival last week would feel insulted if we denied them the name of Christians. But is this wild, ungovernable rage for the possession of wealth not as base as the unnatural pagan vices, from which we had fondly hoped the love of Christ had freed us?

"Consider the demoralizing effects of all this upon the youth of our land, and upon the working people. What young man is not excited, unhinged, and demoralized by the accounts of the magic gains of the stock gambler? Ten thousand dollars on a single bet! Even hundreds of thousands in a day! What training, what advice, what fear is to counteract the gambling poison which these doings will inject into the nation's life? You tell your boys to be patient, to work hard, to be industrious, to be honest, and they will succeed; but the air is full of facts that belie all your sober counsels.

"Then the influence on the working-man, if not more deep is more dangerous to our present social order. While millionaire gamblers are making counters of the industries of his hands, he is studying the economic problems of wealth production and distribution and wondering how long the law will allow the gambler to make paper values and imperil trade, and stain a nation's good name for their own selfish ends. And as he compares his petty earnings with the fabulous sums thus lost and won it drives him to communism and anarchy. Such a hideous mockery of honesty and industry must be made to cease.

"The vast aggregations of capital, the prosperity of the country make the whole practice of stock gambling a menace to public morals and commercial prosperity such as never existed before."

Bad as Card Gaming, Says Dr. Stolz.

"The Curse of Speculation" was the subject of Dr. Joseph Stolz's sermon in Isaiah Temple. The desire to make money, said Dr. Stolz, was not reprehensible. Money was a good thing if rightly used. However, there is too much tendency to measure everything by money.

"The highest salaried man," said Dr. Stolz, "need not be the best man. The largest income is by no means the necessary equation of the largest manhood. Money is not a bad thing in itself, but the harm comes when we make money and not character the test of manhood.

"The evil in speculation is that it is gambling—all risk and no work. To my mind there is no moral difference between making a living from dealing in futures and making a living from dealing out cards, unless we would say that it is less wicked to steal $100,000 from the bank than it is to steal a loaf of bread from the bakery. Those who gamble on the Stock Exchange are as guilty as those who gamble in any other gambling-house. They both take something for nothing.

"Speculation is a passion which grows with the years and feeds upon its success—a passion scarcely less irresistible and less injurious than drink. Furthermore, the easy manner in which fortunes are sometimes made puts honest labor to shame. Men grow restless over the small returns which come in from the hard labor of their hands and brains, and they seek a short cut to wealth. Thus does speculation corrupt the manhood of a country. It weakens the foundations of the land. It corrupts those who win. It disheartens and debases those who lose.

"This is not my verdict; it is the experience of history."

Hunger for Riches a Menace.

In the course of his sermon on "The Uses of Adversity," Dr. Jenkin Lloyd Jones, preaching in All Souls' Church, said:

"The greatest menace to all the interests of life now threatening us is that hunger for riches that turns longing eyes to unexhausted 'treasure-houses,' in which we are to rejoice 'notwithstanding the sad loss of life,' and, it might be added, the sadder loss of ideals and the disintegrations of personal purity and individual integrity.

"Alas for the man or nation who hastens to violate the principle of quid pro quo and gloats over the prospect of unearned riches."

TALKS OF UNWISE ALLIANCES.

Henry Irving Rasmus Says the Great Battlefield Is Between Christian Faith and Infidelity.

The Rev. Henry Irving Rasmus, pastor of South Park Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, preached yesterday on the subject: "An Unholy Alliance." In the course of his sermon he said:

"The battlefield of this republic is the conflict between Christian faith and infidelity. Infidelity is not dead, nor does it sleep. There is at present a movement to erect a temple in the heart of Chicago in memory of the greatest and most brilliant agnostic of his time, Robert G. Ingersoll. No rightly balanced man can object to such a structure in commemoration of the man, but to perpetuate the teachings hostile to Christianity, of which he was the champion, it can only be regarded with regret, and these it will perpetuate long after the man is well nigh forgotten.

"It has been claimed by some that an unrighteous league exists between the State and the saloon. Is it true? The present agitation is to settle the question whether the army canteen is a benefit or a damage to the military post. But back of that lies a mightier question. Has this modern Nero a right to exist anywhere? Does the State have a right to give its hand in union to this red-handed crime, with heart black as the midnight pit? The cry of the humanity of our times is that something shall be done to curtail its ravages. Fanaticism may not be able to point a way, but sober-minded men can."

TRUE PREACHERS CAST OUT.

Dr. F. W. Gunsaulus Talks in Studebaker Theater of Increasing Numbers Excluded from Old Creeds.

Dr. F. W. Gunsaulus preached yesterday morning in the Studebaker Theater to a larger congregation than ever. His sermon was upon self-examination as to what is the true faith. He spoke of the increasing number of true souls cut out from the work of preaching for Christ, because they were unable to subscribe to the views of the different theological boards.

"Christ," said Dr. Gunsaulus, "never asked a man 'what is your idea of foreordination? What is your opinion of the trinity?' but he taught God is good, and good is God, and he that willeth to do the will of God shall know all doctrine.

"Wesleyanism and Calvinism seem so small in the presence of the man of Galilee. It is just as impossible to found a system of theology in the eighteenth century to be taught and subscribed to for all time as it would be to endow a chair of electricity in one of our colleges to teach electricity forever from the books and ideas we now have of that science."

The Tribune Amateur Gardeners' Contest.

The North Avenue Business-Men's association, of which A. J. Sidder is President, is helping along the movement for a beautiful Chicago in a generously practical manner. Each member of the association, or at least a majority of them, is presenting his customers with potted plants and flower seeds. In this way many families are supplied with flowers and seeds free who might not have felt able to buy them.

A TRIBUNE reader living in Butler street asks: "Will you kindly state what plants or flowering plants are best to grow between curb and sidewalk? Prof. Henderson says they would not be touched. Shall we try?"

There is no reason why the strip between the curb and sidewalk should not be cultivated with flowers, provided it is wide enough. In the thickly settled parts of the city it is not wise, however, to plant many flowers, owing to the superabundance of dust from the street. In the suburbs, or along streets where there is little teaming, it is different; in such districts anything that will grow in a garden will thrive here equally well.

The annual larkspur is well adapted for such a situation. Dwarf nasturtiums also form a pretty carpet and are not regarded as attractive to the small boy. "But," comments an old gardener, "taking everything into consideration, nothing equals a well-kept lawn with Norway or hard maple trees every twenty-five or thirty feet."

The Wheaton Improvement association has taken up the question of municipal beautifying in great earnest. It has offered eighteen cash prizes, aggregating $120, as follows: Six prizes of $10 each for the greatest improvement of a yard during the season, the grouping of plant and shrubs, and the neatness and care of the lawn; six prizes of $5 each for the neatest back yard with or without vegetable garden; six prizes of $5 each for the best collection of perennial plants and flowering shrubs. There will be no entries in this competition. Every resident of Wheaton is expected to compete, and the prizes will be awarded in the fall with due publicity.

HINTS FOR AMATEURS. NO. 24.

The Use of Grains for Decorative Purposes.

Comparatively few people are acquainted with the varied and delightful possibilities of grains as harmonizers and decorative agents. Oats, wheat, rye, buckwheat, all are as satisfactory as simple. Each has its own place and particular field of usefulness to the amateur gardener who would improve and beautify the "back yard."

There is a place, perhaps, which needs cutting off from the yard proper. Manure, flower pots, the inevitable supplies and concomitants of gardening for which it is difficult to find a concealed harbor, especially with limited ground and cellar space at command, are there collected. For reasons of expense or convenience it is not practicable to erect a screen frame for vines to cover. The sunflowers or other tall plants arranged in screen fashion will be beautiful and efficacious by and by, but are necessarily ineffective during the early summer. The ugly place meanwhile stares the whole yard in the face. Plant double rows of green corn—of the common or Kaffir varieties—before it. The lovely, rustling sheaves and tassels will quickly supply any possible lack of scantiness in the foliage or flower growth of the flowers behind them.

The corn shoots up so quickly, once the fine, warm weather sets in, that it may be reckoned on as speedily—almost immediately—helpful. Corn should be planted immediately, just as soon as a day or two of good, strong sunshine has warmed and prepared the earth for its coming. From early summer until late autumn it will be a thing of beauty and a perfect joy. If decorative color effects are sought after, plant blue cornflowers, white day lilies, or pink and scarlet poppies before and among it. A thick row of the new double or dwarf sunflowers planted before the corn rows will supply at once an unending supply of brilliant blossoms from early June until the frost kills them, and a wondrously perfect harmony of gold and green for perpetual enjoyment.

A far corner of the back yard may contain a heap of earth, dust, rubbish of all kinds which it seems perfectly hopeless for various reasons to think of removing this summer. Buy, in this contingency, a quart or two of oats, soak over night in warm water, and scatter liberally over the heap. The oats will come up shortly, thick, splendid, gloriously green. A patch of waving oats will furnish effects to dream of from early in their career until the late autumn. The green will turn to golden and dull yellow as the season progresses, but the wonderful effects will suffer nothing. Where a back yard or garden is scant of grass and bare looking, sow oats pretty thickly also. Cut and mow precisely as ordinary grass is treated. But satisfactory results will be attained much more quickly than with ordinary grass seed, and oats will thrive and prosper frequently where grass will not. The color, too, is much brighter than most of the grass varieties possible in Chicago.

Wheat is beautifully bright and satisfactory also, and its golden sheaves will be highly appreciated as the autumn progresses. A patch of oats or wheat forms a most novel and delightful background for a glassy lawn, beds of brilliant blossoms, or the garden "cozy corner," in which canvas chairs invite one and the hammock swings low. Viewed in the moonlight, these grain patches are enchanting. When sunlight and shadow alternate over them as the clouds overhead sweep by the effect is no less delightful.

Where fences do not obtain, yet some measure of privacy and seclusion, some hint or suggestion of division of property seems expedient or desirable, a row of tall corn sheaves, backed by sturdy rye, which grows tallest of all the grains, fronted perhaps by the green and golden wheat sheaves and with golden sunflowers, blue larkspur, or pink and scarlet poppies to give variety, will prove more than enchanting. And there can be no possible way of outlining secluded walks or shutting off unpleasant or unbeautiful corners more simple and satisfactory than that furnished by the use of grains.

EDITOR CHICAGO TRIBUNE:

I desire to compete for the prizes you offer for the best garden and window displays.

DR. BARROWS IN THE PULPIT.

The Rev. John Henry Barrows, President of Oberlin College, occupied the pulpit of the First Presbyterian Church yesterday morning. "Jesus Christ should never be dissociated from the Lord's Prayer," said Dr. Barrows. "He was its author, its interpreter, and its supporter. I do not wonder that some men when they picture the Lord as an Eastern monarch with autocratic power cast him from their life, but if we look higher and understand his words we find him a parent and not a monarch. When we look around us and see the vice and crime, wretched poverty and sorrows, we sometimes almost loath man. But when we read the words in that simple little prayer, we look higher and realize that it is not his will that such conditions exist."

FINDS BIBLE THE BEST BOOK.

R. W. Rogers Preaches in Lake View Congregational Church on Its Superiority.

"The Superiority of the Bible Over Other Books" was the subject of the Rev. R. W. Rogers in Lake View Congregational Church last evening.

"Because we are entering upon an epoch of reconstruction in religious thought," said he, "there is especially a need of greater interest in the scriptures. Everywhere there is a cry, 'Back to Christ.' But it might be well to add, 'Back to the Bible,' for the multitudes can never return to the Nazarene until first they study his biography in the gospels.

"A religion without a Bible is a religion of harmless abstractions and aimless platitudes, incapable of being grasped by the masses."

USE PISTOL AND WHIP IN FIGHT.

Two Men Fall Out at Clark and Division Street—Frank Hurley Shot, Frank Wilson Arrested.

The action of Frank Hurley in seizing a cab driver's whip to protect himself against a blow may prove fatal to him. He is now at the Alexian Brothers' Hospital, suffering from a bullet wound in the cheek and neck, said to have been inflicted by Frank Wilson, colored.

The shooting occurred early yesterday morning at Clark and Division streets. Wilson made his escape, but gave himself up later. He lives at 180 Twentieth street. George Hyde, who is said to have been with him at the time of the shooting, is locked up at the East Chicago Avenue Station.

Hurley and several friends were standing at Clark and Division streets, when Wilson passed. Hurley, it is said, made a remark which the colored man resented, and as the latter turned around in anger Hurley seized a whip in a cab. Before he could defend himself the colored man shot him. The bullet passed through Hurley's cheek and lodged in his neck. Physicians at the hospital said the wound was serious, though they have hopes for the victim's recovery.

Wilson is a banjo player and has been employed in "Andy" Almer's saloon in Division street. He walked into the Harrison Street Police Station at 7:30 o'clock last night and gave himself up.

WOULD CURB GOVERNOR'S VETO.

Suggestion to Extend Assembly's Session to Act on Bills Disapproved by Executive.

Both the lawmakers and men prominent in political life throughout this State are discussing a suggestion that future General Assemblies should not adjourn sine die until after the Governor has acted on all measures left with him. Under the constitution Illinois' Chief Executive has ten days after final adjournment of the session in which to examine the bills that have been enacted into laws and dispose of them.

Scores of bills receive more than two-thirds of the total vote, and as this number is required to pass a bill over the Governor's objections it is said they could be mustered if the lawmakers had an opportunity to act. The proposition, therefore, is that the rules be changed, requiring an agreement to close down on business at a specified time, take a recess for ten days, and then meet again to consider and act on such bills as the Governor failed to approve.

Prior to May 4, when the last Assembly adjourned sine die, less than 2 per cent of the bills passed had been laid before the Governor.

On that day a large basketful was dumped on his desk. The report from Springfield was that Governor Yates had vetoed the amendment to the election law because it was faulty in its construction. It could be drawn properly and passed if there were to be two days more of the session for the purpose of straightening out just such matters. As it now stands, two years must elapse before the law can be amended.

BAPTISTS APPEAL FOR AID.

Church Members in Jacksonville, Fla., Ask Brethren of United States to Assist Them.

Jacksonville, Fla., May 12.—The Baptists of Jacksonville today issued an appeal to the Baptists of America, in which they say that the First Baptist Church with its contents was destroyed, the pastor and family saving only the clothes on their backs, while library and furniture went up in flames. Scores of church people are said to be homeless and many of them destitute. Donors are asked to send contributions to Dr. W. A. Hobson, pastor, or E. E. Cleveland, chairman Board of Deacons.

NEGROES LAY A CORNER-STONE.

Ceremony at New Colored Oddfellows' Hall—Fiftieth Anniversary of the Order.

The colored Oddfellows of the city laid the corner-stone of their new Oddfellows' Hall in State street, between Forty-second and Forty-third streets, yesterday afternoon, the fiftieth anniversary of the order. The Hutchinson Lodge, the oldest organization of colored Oddfellows in Chicago, had charge of the ceremonies. E. H. Morris, Grand Master of the American jurisdiction of the Grand United Order of Oddfellows, delivered the oration and set the stone in place. When completed the hall will cost about $50,000. It will be ready for occupancy by autumn.

Iowa Man Dies at County Hospital.

Charles Waffle, 55 years old, was found unconscious in his bed at Green's Hotel, 4143 Halsted street, yesterday and was removed in the Stock-Yards police ambulance to the County Hospital, where he died. Dr. Eskridge pronounced his death due to brain trouble. A Coroner's inquest will be held on the remains today. Waffle was a German, and lived at Fairfield, Ia.

ASKS PRESIDENT TO ACT.

CIVIL SERVICE OFFICERS ACCUSE PHILADELPHIA POSTMASTER.

Repeated Violations of the Law Are Charged Against Thomas L. Hicks in Report of Investigating Committee—Partisanship and Other Offenses Said to Be Flagrantly Committed by Him—Detailed Accusations Set Forth in Statement.

New York, May 12.—The Investigating committee of the National Civil Service Reform league has filed a report on the Philadelphia postoffice and the alleged violations of the civil service law by Postmaster Thomas L. Hicks. The report is made to the National council by William Dudley Foulke, Richard Henry Dana, William A. Aiken, Charles Richardson, and George McAneny.

The report details the efforts made to secure an investigation of the Philadelphia postoffice by Congress. These efforts all ended in failure. Failing to secure action in Congress, a letter was written to President McKinley by William Dudley Foulke, the chairman of the Investigating committee.

The letter calls the President's attention to eight specific cases in which Postmaster Hicks is alleged to have violated the civil service laws.

The offenses told of in the letter are as follows:

"Upon investigation by the Civil Service commission, a considerable number of laborers were found to be running canceling machines, which is part of the duties of classified clerks. Our committee is informed of a number of instances in which such laborers performed classified work. By means of such appointments Mr. Hicks is enabled to fill the office largely with persons of his own selection in defiance of the rules."

The second and third charges made in the letter to the President dwell upon the partisan attitude of Postmaster Hicks in the matter of appointments, promotions, and dismissals. The fourth charge gives a list of reductions made by the postmaster for political reasons.

Charge five says: "In our interview with Postmaster Hicks, Mr. Dana informed him it had been said that he required indemnity bonds to be taken by all his subordinates in the National Surety company of New York, and asked why it was necessary that such bonds should be made by this particular company. Mr. Hicks replied that that company had gone upon his bond and that he wanted it upon the bonds of the subordinates for whose acts he was responsible."

Charge six says that Postmaster Hicks when he made promotions in certain positions compelled the men to sign statements to the effect that their appointments were probationary.

Charge seven says that the Civil Service commission was ignored and defied by the postmaster at Philadelphia.

Charge eight says: "Mr. Hicks, in conjunction with Mr. Perry Heath, formerly First Assistant Postmaster General, has secured the admission of a considerable number of persons into the classified service of his postoffice without examination."

LABOR BODY TO STAND ALONE.

Building Trades League Rejects Proposal to Become Part of a New Organization.

Secretary Steinbiss of the National Building Trades council has failed to induce the Building Trades league, the new central organization, to dissolve and merge in a proposed new central body, which would include all the building trades of the city. His plan was to have the Chicago Building Trades council and the Building Trades league give the Executive board of the National Building Trades council full power to act, with the understanding both organizations were to be dissolved and a new central body organized. The Building Trades council promptly complied with the suggestion but at yesterday's meeting of the Building Trades league indicated its purpose not only to refuse to give up its organization, but to become the organization which Secretary Steinbuss hoped would bring together all the building trades of the city. Secretary Steinbuss, making the best of the situation, expressed his willingness to help it in securing a charter from the National Building Trades council.

DOWIEITE KEPT OUT OF UNION.

Told by General Overseer Such Organizations Were Opposed by Zion—Egg Inspectors Strike.

John Woodley, a member of Dowie's Zion, decided he would like to join the Egg Inspectors' union. He went so far as to send in his application as well as a money deposit, when it occurred to him it might be contrary to the tenets of Zionism. He sought advice of Overseer Dowie, who replied that Zion's testimony was against secret unions of any kind.

Eleven members of the Egg Inspectors' union went on a strike Saturday against three South Water street commission-houses which would not sign the scale.

CALM IN LONDON MARKET.

FINANCIAL EXPERTS NOW ASSERT PANIC DID NO REAL HARM.

Report That Heavy Short Interests Will Have Trouble on Settlement Day Is Emphatically Denied — Some Curbstone Brokers and One or Two Others Liable to Fail—Money Situation Hardens for Reasons Plainly Evident—France Trying to Unload.

LONDON, May 12.—Your Wall street excitement has found little echo here. Noisy crowds shouted in the Stock Exchange all day and in the street for an hour or two in the evening, but the general market remained calm, and only in Glasgow did anything approaching the excitement of panic occur. Glasgow is, however, one of the wildest gambling corners in the kingdom. We, I am assured, have not been deeply implicated in the most recent phase of your stock speculation. The short interest here has never been large, and, as I explained last week, the pace recently has been much too fast for any but the most irresponsible class of operators. On the balance realizations by genuine stockholders have much exceeded the average, and recent steamers have carried quite unusual values of your securities home. Our market, therefore, stands to receive money from yours, and, being in that position, serious trouble is not looked for.

Some Failures Are Expected.

A few curbstone operators are expected to throw up the sponge, and I heard yesterday that one of the biggest inside firms is in difficulties and may fail. Otherwise the panic has been stopped before striking us. Yet its occurrence has had noticeable effect on business in all departments. On our Stock Exchange and in general business a weakening in prices went on all through the week, consols dipping below 94 and the new stock at one time sinking to a small discount.

In the money market the effect of the New York disturbance has been noticeable in strengthening of the discount rate. Early in the week Eastern banks were doing their utmost to work the rate on their paper down to 3⅝ per cent, and by Friday they were glad to sell at 3⅞ per cent, while the general class of discounters had to pay 3¾ per cent. This hardening was not due to dear short credits. These have never been above 3¼ per cent for time loans, and the more general rate has been 3 to 3¼ per cent. Call money indeed sometimes dipped to below 3 per cent. Nor has there been any pressure of bills coming forward for discount. The market hardened under two influences, first in preparation for the sale of £2,500,000 treasury bills renewals on Friday, and second because your disturbance frightened credit dealers regarding the possibilities of next week's Stock Exchange settlement.

Has No Fear Over Settlement.

Nothing in particular is going to happen over our Stock Exchange payments as far as I can judge. It is not, however, improbable that next week's installment of new consols may force borrowers back upon the Bank of England for perhaps several millions. The actual amount of this installment is under £4,000,000, and probably the bank already holds half of it in shape of excess application money retained against call. But the sellings of old stock were extensive for some time before the new was issued, and many of the sellers intend to complete their contracts by delivering the new stock at the June settlement. This compels them to pay up in full next Friday, and the scramble after accommodation then will be intense or moderate, according to the extent of these payments. The market is unable to forecast what it may be called upon to furnish in the way of credit, therefore the rates are kept up, and the exchequer yesterday had to pay nearly 3¾ per cent for its renewed six months' bills.

Stock Market Gets Setback.

Stock Exchange business was becoming more extensive until your Wall street ruption came and frightened people off, but it was chiefly in the investment direction, and now stagnation again rules.

Paris desires to unload here in preparation for a new Russian loan, and finds us unresponsive.

Range of Cotton Prices.

Cotton—The market opened steady with prices 4 to 7 points higher on strong cables and a bad scare of room shorts. July was advanced to 7.88c and August to 7.47c on the first wave of buying. On the rise the West and Europe purchased several large blocks of near months. Soon after the call the market turned heavy and broke six to nine points under profit taking and selling on the reaction theory. The new crop months were weak on the decline, with October off to below last night's closing. Claims that the market owed its strength to bad weather and crop reports rather than to July manipulation were disqualified by this heaviness in the new crop months. Europe sold July around 7.80c after the call. Wall street and the South sold for a break. Receipts were a trifle larger than expected and the outlook was favorable to a large movement next week. The weather chart reported showers in the western and parts of the central belt, while the forecast indicated general rains for the better part of the belt tomorrow. Business quieted down as the morning wore along and for the most part was of professional origin. The market closed steady with prices net 8 to 11 points lower.

Western Grain Markets.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., May 11.—The bearish government report coming out late on Friday had the effect of opening wheat a fraction lower this morning and bringing a general feeling of dullness and hesitation into the market. No material decline followed, however, for the reason that the report had been discounted in the declines of the earlier part of the week. July opened at 72¼c, sold to 71⅝c for low, and recovered to 72c. Trade was dull, and the pit almost deserted at times. Towards the end September turned firmer and closed a shade higher, at 69⅝c; May, 71c; July, 71⅞@72c. Cash demand was fair. Offerings were light all around. No. 1 Northern ranged over ½c for ordinary, on the early option decline, and sales were made at 72⅝@73c; No. 2 Northern, 70@71c; No. 3, 65@69c. Flour—Quiet and dull. American cotton yarns still irregular, but steadier in some counts. Woolen and worsted yarns also somewhat steadier. Linen yarns firm.

Interior receipts, 11,800 bags. Coffee was dull and easy. Santos receipts were considered liberal, and there was nothing stimulating in the cables from Europe, while Rio exchange was 1-32d lower, and the cash trade here continued dull. Under the circumstances a little local selling caused a decline.

Features of importance or price changes were lacking today in the local market for metals, which was principally due to the absence of cable information from abroad. # RESULT OF STOCK PANIC.

HURTS THE CONFIDENCE FOR GENERAL BUSINESS.

In Other Respects Commercial Interests Are Unharmed by the Occurrences in Wall Street—Quotations on Chicago Bank Stocks — Wholesale Lines Are Steady—Wheat and Corn Seek Lower Levels, the Latter Market Being Much Less Erratic.

The disturbance of the hopeful confidence that existed for general business is one result of the panic that came over the New York stock market last week. The situation had been full of purposes to be achieved which were entirely independent of the wave of stock speculation which had passed over the country. While the crash that came is unfortunate, as it dampens the enthusiasm which prevailed, no other end was possible with the top-heavy conditions which existed in the market.

In a general sense the commercial business of the country has not been harmed by the stock panic, but no such crash can occur without causing reflection that will make for caution in every line of trade, and so far as foreign business relations are concerned they will receive a setback. At the time when the widest encouragement respecting the country's position was entertained in Europe the worst tumble ever known in stocks here came to pass.

Every one knew that the speculative fever must end some day, and while the conservative element among bankers and others closely in touch with the situation turned some time before the crash, they were not arguing for higher prices, as some were, at the top of the market.

Rapid Changes in Stock Prices.

Those who had overspeculated and overbought the entire market placed it in such a position that the reaction which finally came was the swiftest and hardest ever experienced. The changes in the stocks from the buoyant movement of the market on Monday and Tuesday, although signs of the culmination were evident then, were extreme. The closing prices of some of the stocks on Tuesday and the low prices of Thursday, the day of the crash, were as follows:

| | Close on Tuesday. | Low on Thursday. |
| Do pfd | 108⅛ | 70 |
| Baltimore and Ohio | 108 | 84 |

Chicago's interest in the market has been a great one, and the local banks sent $25,000,000 to the relief of the situation when help was needed most. Local traders made large losses on the break. That the banks were able to respond so quickly and generally to the demands on local brokers by their New York correspondents for margins is an indication of the good condition of business in the city. Large investments were made by Chicagoans while stocks were near the low point.

Local brokers declined to take any orders while the crash was proceeding, and some refused to accept the cash to buy stock outright. They were distrustful of the condition of Wall street houses and did not want to risk any more money than they had to. Buying orders which would have helped to steady the market were not transmitted on this account.

The Chicago stock market saw some liquidating, caused by the situation in New York, but the majority of local issues stood up well under and through the trouble in the East. National Biscuit and American Can issues declined, but the losses have been largely made up. Calls for margins in the East compelled some Chicagoans to sacrifice local stocks, and this selling occurred so sharply that buying orders which developed as soon as the prices were realized were too late to take avail of the low quotations. At the end of the week the local exchange was enlivened by an upward movement in American Linseed, which was accompanied by stories of a corner, of Standard Oil control, and final arrangements for a readjustment of the company's finances.

Wheat Loses About Two Cents.

The general trend of wheat was downward, the natural result of the bearish condition which generally prevailed. The unusual events in Wall street had little or no effect on the grain market, but it did not need a panic of that character to depress prices. The close of the week found wheat from 2c to 2⅜c lower than on the previous Saturday, with the temper of the trading contingent generally changed in accordance with the new conditions. These latter were presented mainly by the government report issued on Friday, which showed a condition of 94.1, as compared with 91.7 the previous month, indicating a crop with perfect conditions maintained to harvest time of 440,000,000 bu, against a final report of last year indicating 230,900,000 bu. A matter of 2,000,000 acres was cut off the area, but the effect of it was entirely overcome by the decided advance in condition. The market during the week was required to absorb an immense amount of wheat from various sources, most of it accumulated locally and disposed of without any decided show of profit. Added to the effect of the government report was the Bradstreet's statement showing exports of only a trifle over 4,000,000, which was a falling off of nearly 2,000,000 for the week. The price range was not a broad one, and while at times there was more or less depression from the heavy offerings, there were on the other hand encouraging recoveries from the break.

Good Cash Business in Corn.

Corn was nowhere near as erratic a market as during the previous week, the May delivery not going higher than 53⅛c and closing 51½c. The low point was 50c. During the entire week the bull leader gave it consistent support and was also actively interested in the July delivery. The cash corn situation is one of decided strength and all through the week had a tendency to support the futures. Some extensive sales were made for shipping purposes all through the period under review and prices satisfactory to holders were secured for all lots. While the corn situation is generally less bullish than previously, the market is not believed to be in a less healthful condition. All the contract grade of cash corn arriving in the market is being taken care of according to promise. Receipts of this grade from various sources averaged about 150,000 bu daily. The large quantities shipped out have made more or less decided inroads in local stocks, and it is considered a question if they will again show much if any increase until the movement of new corn.

There was moderate activity in coarse grain during the week, oats being the favorite from a speculative standpoint. The feature of the trade was the sale of 1,000,000 bu in one lot, part to go East and the remainder South. This sale was more or less of a help to prices for a time, but reactions set in later. It is said to be the plan of the principal holder of contract stock, which is less than 3,000,000 bu, to encourage as large shipments as possible as a means of strengthening the position of the grain. Export demand continues good, with seaboard clearances showing a substantial increase over the previous week. Provisions did not show much feature until well along toward the close of the week, when packing interests became active and heavy sellers of product, depressing prices thereby.

Wholesale Trade Steady.

Wholesale trade conditions as a whole continue satisfactory, the volume of outgoing goods being about on the scale of the weeks immediately preceding. Prices in nearly all lines continue steady, and no extraordinary demand is making itself manifest in any of the trade lines. A revival of building operations, always a feature of the spring and early summer season, is having a beneficial effect on lumber and general building hardware.

It is said there would be a heavy movement in anthracite coal during May if shippers would guarantee current prices. Many shippers have had orders on their books since early in April which they have not yet been able to fill. The principal business at this time is in the filling of these holdover orders at the full May circular, that being the agreement.

HELPS OUT CATHOLIC PUPILS.

Absentee from Public Schools While Preparing for First Communion Will Escape Demerit Marks.

Church and state have clashed in the St. Laurence Parish of the Roman Catholic Church, and the church has won. The Rev. Father Sylvester Moloney announced the victory to his parishioners yesterday morning at St. Laurence Church, Seventy-third street and Madison avenue, and peace reigns once more in that district.

Catholic pupils of the Walter Scott School, the Parkside School, and the Park Manor School who were preparing to take their first communion in St. Laurence Church, under the rules of the church, were required to attend the instruction classes under Father Moloney in the morning, and the principals of the schools refused to take any excuses for tardiness on the part of these pupils.

Father Moloney protested in vain to Principal Akers of the Walter Scott School, Mrs. McEchorn, principal of the Parkside School, and Principal Dennis of the Park Manor School. Then he laid the matter before Superintendent Cooley Saturday, who at once issued instructions to the several principals which will relieve the fears of the school children whose parents are parishioners of Father Moloney.

There are about 500 families in St. Laurence Parish, and the first communion class numbers over 100 children, practically all of whom attend the public schools.

VETERANS GOING TO PEORIA.

Chicago Grand Army Men Will Travel to the State Encampment in Force on Special Train.

About 250 members of Illinois posts of the G. A. R. will leave over the Alton road for Peoria tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock to attend the annual encampment. Many of the members of the Women's Relief corps and the families of the delegates also will go on the same train, which will be the headquarters of the Department Commander.

George H. Thomas and U. S. Grant Posts will have the largest number of attendants, fifty members of each body having signified their intention of going. The unwritten law governing the term of office will result in the retirement of Joel M. Longenecker and the election of his successor.

Captain M. B. Thistlewood, Mayor of Cairo, is talked of as a successor, and Judge Trimble of Peoria also is mentioned for the office. The Chicago delegation will return to the city on a special train that will leave Peoria two hours after the adjournment of the encampment. It is expected that all the business will be transacted and the encampment ended Thursday evening.

READY TO TRY "MOTHER" LYONS

Several Ministers to Testify Against Woman Accused of Detaining Jennie Johnson.

Several ministers will appear in the Criminal Court today as witnesses in the trial of Mary Lyons, better known as "Mother" Lyons, who is charged with detaining Jennie Johnson, a 16-year-old girl in her home in West Madison street. The girl claims to have been inveigled to the place by an advertisement.

Assistant State's Attorney Olson, who will conduct the prosecution of the woman, intimates that the name or names of Chicago business-men will appear in the testimony. Warrants are said to have been issued from the State's Attorney's office for the arrest of one man on the testimony given by the girl.

Professor Graham Taylor of the Chicago Theological Seminary and Dr. Conditt will appear to testify to the character of the girl, and are displaying deep interest in the prosecution of the case.

REUNION OF THE PHILOSOPHERS

Members of Chicago Society of Thirty-five Years Ago Plan a Banquet.

The few remaining members of the Chicago Philosophical society, an organization that flourished thirty-five years ago, are arranging for a reunion and dinner at the Palmer House next Saturday evening. Most of the members have lost track of each other, and the Secretary, H. H. Anderson, does not know where to send the invitations. Consequently, he and John W. Ela are trusting to the newspapers. The Rev. H. W. Thomas will be master of ceremonies, and there will be short responses to toasts by Judge Waterman, Judge Burke, Mr. Ela, Dr. Sarah Hackett Stevenson, Dr. Julia Holmes Smith, and others.

Lecture on Care of the Eye.

The fourth of the series of lectures for teachers and nurses, under the auspices of the Chicago Hospital School for Nervous and Delicate Children, will be given at 5 p. m. tomorrow by Dr. Frank Allport. Subject: "The Eye—Its Care and Treatment."

PANIC HAS LEFT ITS MARK

STOCK MARKET STILL SUFFERS FROM THURSDAY'S SHOCK.

Most Remarkable Event of a Most Remarkable Period in the History of Wall Street Gives Rise to Endless Guessing as to Original Cause of Trouble—Real Facts in Case May Never Be Generally Known — No Failures Now Feared.

[BY A SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.]

NEW YORK, May 12.—[Special.]—The overshadowing feature of last week was the stock market panic of Thursday. The break in prices on that day may correctly be designated as panicky, and it is doubtful whether in the history of the Stock Exchange there have ever been recorded such rapid and extensive declines. Increases in prices which had taken weeks to be rolled up were wiped out in thirty minutes. The consequent losses incurred by speculators were simply enormous, and beyond question, prior to the turn in prices, the Wall street community, or certainly a large portion of it, was insolvent. The subsequent comparative steadiness in prices was largely owing to the announcement made after the close of business on Thursday that the corner on Northern Pacific stock had been broken and that the banks would continue to extend special facilities to the Wall street community.

Thursday's panic, however, has left the stock market in a highly excited and nervous condition. As noted, enormous losses have been incurred by speculators, and this fact, together with the crushing blow administered to confidence, makes it appear likely that there must be a practical lapse of time before the market tendencies which prevailed up to the beginning of this week will be renewed. Whether it is desirable that they should or not is a matter of interest chiefly to speculators and stock brokers. The fact remains, however, that in all probability the most striking rise that ever appeared in the history of the world's market for securities has, for the time being, culminated.

Two specific causes may be cited in connection with Thursday's panic, and to these some observers and critics add others. The most direct, at all events, were the threatening conditions in the money market and the pernicious influence of the corner in Northern Pacific; indeed, it might be said with truth that apprehensions excited by the various moves of antagonistic capitalists that led up to the corner were the main influence in the disastrous break in prices.

It is wholly natural that with the market at the general level at which it ruled in the earlier part of the week, and with speculative sentiment so excited and nervous, the disclosure of the fact that the dominant railway interests of the country were not only not working in harmony but were engaged in a most bitter and recriminating contest, confidence had been shaken and speculative sentiment fairly demoralized. A number of stock market oracles who have been preaching the unwisdom of the advance in prices for the last six months naturally found in Thursday's panic a complete vindication of their dogmas. It is unnecessary to say that they have not been slow in proclaiming the vindication of their prophecies, yet they would doubtless have continued false prophets for an indefinite period had not their standpoint been helped by the adventitious circumstances.

It may with propriety be observed that while the terrific break in prices of Thursday may be designated as a panic, the disturbance was limited wholly to the stock market. Furthermore, none of the usual phenomena of a panic other than the demoralization in market values was present. Wall street's localized panic is not apt to be reflected to any great extent in the country's trade. The agricultural outlook continues exceedingly promising, and in fact the financial outlook as a whole is as gratifying as it has been throughout the spring. It may be, as noted, that an effectual curb has been put upon the indiscriminating speculative fervor which has prevailed since the 1st of March, but it is hard to believe that the jealousies and ambitions of a set of capitalists, however powerful, can put a final quietus upon the current revival in American finance and trade, and it is indubitably far from the interests of the men in question that they should conspire in one way or another to such an end.

Regarding the responsibility for Thursday's crash a financial writer says: "Who was responsible for the mischievous situation which nearly wrecked the Stock Exchange? Probably this will continue for all time one of those controversial points which students of history and tradition love. With the exception of a stock jobbing clique, which would stop at nothing to relieve its assistants of their purses and which found congenial employment in bringing Thursday's disaster to a head, there is intelligible excuse for the attitude in which each of the mischiefmakers was discovered. A contest for control is legitimate, and it is reasonable that buyers should prefer to have stock from those who sold to them, instead of cash penalties.

"When this is said, however, all is said. Not a shred of excuse is left for criminal and blundering obstinacy which prefers to sacrifice the whole community rather than yield a point in a personal contest. The compromise which was possible at noon or at 6 o'clock on Thursday was equally possible at 10 on Wednesday. It was known then that the stock which the victims of the corner had engaged to deliver could not be procured; it was also known that the buyers had the requisite stock in their own possession. That high grade financiers should have stood on their legal rights under such conditions is almost inconceivable."

Next to purity, the yeast used in brewing is of the utmost importance in beer. Perfect beer requires a perfect yeast, and rarely does a brewer find it.

The Schlitz brewery introduced chemically pure yeast in America. It has made Schlitz beer the most palatable, healthful beer that is brewed.

The original mother cells form a priceless asset. All the yeast used in Schlitz beer forever will be developed from them. As a result Schlitz beer will never vary, and there'll never be another beer like Schlitz.

GOOD MAN FOR GRAHAM'S PLACE.

President Hanberg Says No "Small Politician" Will Be Made Warden.

WILL GET REPORT TODAY

Findings of Hospital Investigators to Be Acted on by County Board.

THINK FIGHT NOT LIKELY.

No doubt is expressed by President Hanberg and the members of the County board concerning that body's concurrence this afternoon in the report of the hospital investigating committee. It is believed the report will be adopted unanimously by the board, and that if a fight is to be made at all it will develop when President Hanberg announces the successor of Warden James H. Graham.

Who that successor will be is unknown, Mr. Hanberg contenting himself with the statement that he will not select a "small politician."

Hanberg Gives His Views.

"I believe a man possessed of considerable executive ability, unquestionable standing, and therefore undoubted honesty should be selected," said Mr. Hanberg. "It will be my purpose to send to the board the name of a man who will be perfectly satisfactory.

"I agree with the report of the committee and shall endeavor to see that it is carried out in every respect. I consider the centralization of the medical management the most important feature next to the selection of the warden. I hope to see the most experienced men on the medical staff formed into a board which must bear the responsibility. Under them I believe the most efficient man obtainable should be placed in charge with the responsibility of the general direction of the medical department. He naturally would be subordinate to the medical staff, but vested with the responsibility of seeing that the members of the staff do their duty. I believe he should be selected by examination and that the recommendation of the committee suggesting a fair examination of employés under the civil service law should be carried out.

"So far as a warden is concerned I have not considered the name of any individual yet, and none has been mentioned to me. I will take my time and will not make an appointment for two weeks, anyway."

Graham Has Some Friends.

While there is believed to be little opposition to the report of the committee, it is known Warden Graham has several friends on the board who are not in favor of dropping him at this time.

Warden Graham always has been considered the representative of William Lorimer, but Mr. Lorimer is in the East now and it is not expected that he will make an attempt to defeat the recommendation of the committee for the appointment of a new warden.

The report of the committee will be presented formally to the board this afternoon at 2 o'clock.

"The report certainly is satisfactory," said Commissioner Organ. "It will compel the 235 employés of the hospital to undergo a fair examination. I am in favor of having a physician at the head of the medical department whose ability is unquestioned. His services may cost the county a round sum, but would mean a saving in the end.

"There is little money upon which the hospital can make changes this year, but the recommendations, if carried out, will result in an economical administration that will save the county more money than the additional salaries will require."

STIRS UP INSURANCE MEN.

NEW MERCANTILE SCHEDULE OF THE UNION ATTACKED.

Manager Lockett's Criticism Said to Be Backed by Survey Bureau—National Convention of Local Fire Agents Will Be Held at Put-in-Bay, Ohio, September 10-12—Estimate of Losses on Jacksonville Fire with Big Premiums Received Last Year.

Considerable discussion has resulted from the circular sent out by the Executive committee of the Chicago Insurance Survey bureau, in which Manager S. H. Lockett criticises the new mercantile schedule of the union. There has been some disposition to resent Mr. Lockett's action, but it is asserted he acted under direction of the Executive committee. Mr. Lockett is of the opinion that the union schedule is made up from the universal mercantile schedule with some slight changes and alterations.

Local Agents' Convention.

Secretary F. F. Holmes of the National Local Fire Insurance Agents' association announces that the annual convention of the association will be held at Put-in-Bay, O., Sept. 10, 11, and 12. The Grand Army meets in Cleveland, which is within seventy miles of Put-in-Bay, the same week, when the Cleveland local agents expect to act as hosts to visitors from the convention at Put-in-Bay. Arrangements have been made for transportation at the rate of about one cent a mile, with stopover privileges to enable agents to visit the Buffalo exposition.

Colonial's Dry Goods Tariff.

The Colonial sends out a circular to its agents announcing a new tariff on dry goods stores. The text of the circular follows:

"For some time past the losses on retail dry goods and department stores have been frequent and disastrous. Many causes and hazards combine to produce this result. Defective electric wiring has been the cause of many fires, although we think this feature has been exaggerated. The modern department store combines the hazard of a large area of sensitive stock with that of touching up and upholstering of furniture, various manufacturing, packing, restaurants, exhibiting of gasoline stoves, and numerous other processes more or less dangerous.

"As it is unlikely we can ever make up what we have lost on this class at the prevailing rates, and as there seems no probability of the rates being placed on a paying basis, we feel that we must either decline to write such risks or obtain premiums therefor which will more nearly pay the losses. We have therefore fixed the following minimum rates, and desire our agents to decline any and all lines on retail dry goods and department stores when the same cannot be obtained.

"On brick buildings or contents having a ground floor area of 10,000 square feet, charge $2.25; on brick buildings or contents having a ground floor area in excess thereof, for each 1,000 square feet in excess charge 25 cents.

"We trust that our agents will appreciate our efforts to place this unprofitable class on a paying basis. These rates do not apply to risks equipped with automatic sprinklers."

Insurance Tax $12,482,429.

J. G. Batterson is quoted as saying: "The combined taxes and fees now imposed upon the insurance companies in all of the States, including the internal revenue stamp tax, amounts to the enormous sum of $12,482,429, and the assembling of a Legislature, East or West, brings prompt notice of a score of bills, both hostile and expensive. Large as it is, this sum has to be increased still further by town and county fees and licenses, with forced advertising in partisan papers, which are not itemized in State reports. Of this sum $6,602,593 was paid in 1899 by the life companies; $5,323,257 by the fire and marine companies; $551,579 by the casualty and miscellaneous companies. For the mutual companies this tax was at the rate of 2.94 per cent upon their entire surplus assets, while the stock life companies paid at the rate of 4.41 plus upon their entire capital and surplus. Casualty and miscellaneous companies paid 2.09 per cent, and the fire and marine 3.46 per cent on capital and surplus, which is independent of the local taxes, which are not available for this computation. Taken as a grand aggregate of all the companies, fire, life, accident, and miscellaneous, the tax is 3.52 per cent on capital and surplus, which must be earned and paid before the first dollar is available for dividends."

Adhere to Competition Rate.

The Chicago Underwriters' Executive committee does not seem inclined to give in on the competitive rate proposition. After refusing to reduce the rate of the Western Electric from 45 to 35 cents, it declined to grant a similar reduction on the plant of the Ritchie Paper company. The mutuals have taken $2,500,000 of the $4,500,000 carried by the Western Electric.

April Losses Estimated.

The Journal of Commerce and Commercial Bulletin's estimate of the fire loss for April is $11,352,800. The figures for April, 1900, were $25,727,000, and included $12,000,000 for the Ottawa-Hull conflagration. The following comparative table will show the losses by months for the first four months of 1899, 1900, and 1901:

| | 1899. | 1900. | 1901. |
|---|---|---|---|
| January | $10,718,000 | $11,755,300 | $16,574,950 |
| February | 18,469,000 | 15,427,000 | 13,992,000 |
| March | 11,493,000 | 13,349,200 | 15,036,250 |
| April | 9,213,000 | 25,727,000 | 11,352,800 |
| Totals | $49,893,000 | $66,258,500 | $56,956,000 |

The Jacksonville disaster will just about equalize the difference in favor of 1901 so far.

ALSCHULER TO BE A WITNESS.

Former Candidate for Governor to Testify in Murder Case Opening at Carbondale Today.

Carbondale, Ill., May 12.—[Special.]—Samuel Alschuler, late Democratic candidate for Governor of Illinois, probably will be called as a witness in a murder trial which will open here tomorrow. The crime was committed on the special train bearing the nominee during the campaign last fall. James Jourdan of Marion and a number of men from Carbondale quarreled on the train, and a fight followed in which Jourdan was shot, dying before the train reached this city. Robert Hatfield and Lem Shadowens, who are connected with the celebrated murder case growing out of the Carterville riots, eighteen months ago, were arrested, charged with the killing of Jourdan. The quarrel with Jourdan grew out of the famous mine riot in which five negroes were killed.

Girls See "Sapho," Are Suspended.

Terre Haute, Ind., May 12.—[Special.]—Principal Meek of the high school suspended six girl students for absence from school last Wednesday afternoon, when they went to the theater, where a popular-price company played "Sapho."

TEXAS MILITIA MEN UNPAID.

State Soldiers Receive Naught for Services Before Spanish War and After Galveston Disaster.

Fort Worth, Tex., May 12.—[Special.]—Members of the Volunteer Guard here are up in arms over the delay in the Legislature in making an appropriation to pay the boys who were mustered in to fight in the Spanish-American war. One of the soldiers said:

"The biggest kick the Texas Volunteer Guard has is the fact that we have never been paid for service in the war. The soldiers of every other State have been paid from the time they were ordered to mobilize until mustered into service. The Texas Legislature made appropriation to pay those who furnished food for the troops, but never passed an appropriation to pay the soldiers.

"The same condition prevails as to the service rendered the State during the period in which Galveston was declared under martial law. This was just following the destruction of the island city by the hurricane of Sept. 8. For that service not a cent has ever been paid the soldiers."

MARSHALL FIELD & CO.

The Most Desirable Goods Not Necessarily "High Priced" Goods

If there remains even a shadow of an impression in the public mind that this is "a high priced store," even a casual investigation of the values here offered will serve to dispel such an impression, and the values here mentioned may easily be termed typical values of the entire store.

For instance, the mere fact that we sell Ribbons at $4.00 a yard, does not imply that this is a high price for the quality offered—neither does it give the slightest ground for believing that all our Ribbons are high priced. On the contrary, we know, and every Ribbon consumer in Chicago knows, that our great outlet for Ribbons, both wholesale and retail, and the immense purchasing power of this house, are both important factors in lowering the retail price of Ribbons, and at the same time raising the standards of quality for a given price.

We mention Ribbons only as an example. What is true of Ribbons, from this standpoint, must be true of Silks, Dress Goods, Ready-to-Wear Apparel, Laces, Gloves, etc., etc.—in fact, everything we sell. This, therefore, must remain, must be self-evident—"our merchandising methods do tend to elevate all standards of quality, while they lower the prices on any given quality."

Gowns for Graduates.

High-necked gowns of pure white, soft and fluffy materials, are the latest ideas for the commencement girl. In addition to our regular lines, we have received a belated shipment of the latest Parisian novelties in white, beautifully trimmed with insertions. The skirts need but a band and they are ready to wear. Sufficient materials for the waist are included. Owing to the lateness in the arrival of these gowns, we received an unusually low price concession, which we also extend to our patrons. They are decidedly the best values ever offered, $7.50, $10.00, $12.50, $15.00.

These gowns will also be extensively worn this summer by the "Piazza Girl."

Dark ecru, batiste allovers, insertions and trimmings are unusually scarce at present. We purchased them when they were plentiful and have almost unlimited quantities in exclusive designs.

Protect Your Furs From Moths During the Summer

By storing them in our Fur Storage Section. We issue a receipt for all furs and winter garments that insures you against all loss from moths, fire, thieves, etc. Before being placed in storage they undergo a thorough renovating process. Repairs and alterations are made more cheaply now, to keep our factory busy during the warmer months. Our wagons will call for Furs to be stored or repaired. Telephone Central 800.

New Furnishings.

The United Crafts' designs in cabinet-making are best described as primitive ideas. That is, forms which would naturally suggest themselves to the first builders of tables, chairs, cupboards, beds and benches. In these designs use and esthetic effect are the only aims sought, and imitation is wholly set aside; while such resemblances to historic styles as may be traced, result from the necessities of the constructive idea.

Our patrons are invited to visit an exhibition of selections from the Workshops of the United Crafts, and an illustrated brochure of designs will be furnished to those who are interested
